Hostages split to foil rescue

Times News Services

The American hostages have been moved from the U.S. embassy in Tehran to various places around the Iranian capital and will be scattered to other parts of the country to foil any new U.S. attempt to rescue them, the Islamic militants occupying the embassy said today.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said at a news conference later that this will also prevent student action against the hostages which the government does not want. He was referring to possible reaction following American efforts to rescue the captives.

Bani-Sadr also said Iran will call for an extradordinary meeting of non-aligned countries to deal with the latest U.S. measures against this country, including the abortive hostage rescue mission.

But Iran would not welcome any Soviet intervention if the country were attacked by another country, he added.

Iran had unilaterally cancelled an agreement with the Soviet Union which would have allowed the Soviets to intervene in Iran if another state invaded: "We don't want Soviet intervention even on our behalf — that will be considered aggression."

And he said the bodies of U.S. servicemen killed in this week's commando raid on Iran — and recovered by the Iranians from the charred wreckage of a U.S. C-130 transport plane and helicopter, which collided in the Iranian desert — would be returned to the U.S. However, there were conflicting reports as to how many American corpses had been located.

In related developments:

— A professional telephone poll conducted Friday indicated that 70 per cent of Americans approve of the raid and think further military action should be tried again to free the hostages.

— UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim personally pleaded with the U.S. and Iran Friday for reason and restraint, and urged them to revive immediately negotiations on a peaceful settlement of the hostage crisis.

— The Iranian National Mobilization Board was reported to have taken preliminary steps towards mobilization of Iran's 20 million-man army.

The militant students said the hostages have been sent to several places in Tehran and will be taken to unidentified Iranian cities where they will be in the hands of the Iranian people there.

The move would seem to take the hostages out of the direct control of the militants occupying the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

The Moslem militants seized the 50 Americans at the embassy 175 days ago. Three other Americans have been held at the foreign ministry.

Had the U.S. raid succeeded, the hostages were to have been flown out of Iran. But the operation foundered when some of the U.S. aircraft developed faults at the operational base in Iran's eastern Kavir-e-Lut desert. Five U.S. servicemen were injured, in addition to the eight killed.

The militants said there were links between the rescue forces and Iranian "mercenaries" in Tehran, and that this information has been handed over to revolutionary leader Ayatollah Khomeini.

Claiming the U.S. operation had a wider purpose than simply the release of the hostages, the militants called for increased security at Khomeini's residence, at radio and television headquarters and at

GM plans 18,000 layoffs

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. plans to eliminate 18,000 workers around the world from its payroll in the No. 1 automaker's first major white collar employee cutback of the current recession.

With production plunging toward recession levels, long-term layoffs of production workers in the battered U.S. auto industry are approaching 180,000.

Indefinite layoffs now stand at 179,850, up from 169,450 last week and higher than a previous peak of 176,800 reached late in February.

In addition, Ford Motor Co. and GM plan to temporarily idle another 30,500 workers next week and suspend production at 13 car and truck operations. GM will have 90,300 U.S. hourly production workers on open-ended layoff.

GM said Friday it expects to reduce its staff of 180,000 salaried workers by 10 per cent as part of cost-cutting program.

Ford and Chrysler took similar steps recently, with Chrysler announcing a 20 per cent reduction in its already depleted white collar work force. Ford has taken steps to trim North American salaried employment by 18 per cent.

GM could not provide a breakdown of where the cutbacks would occur or when.

Beach patrol debut score: 355 bottles and 14 minors

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Saanich police began their crackdown on beach parties in earnest Friday night.

The 10-member beach patrol was out for the first time and used the RCMP helicopter to spot large fires in parks and beaches off the beaten track.

A spokesman said officers were kept busy but at least had the manpower to contend with the problems.

The beach patrol broke up numerous parties, seized 355 bottles of beer, 104 ounces of liquor and 156 ounces of wine and charged 14 minors with being in possession of liquor.

They also set up patrols at liquor outlets and turned away scores of would-be shoppers.

One officer said he intercepted 28 minors trying to make purchases and sent them packing.

Two youths were detained in police cells overnight for being drunk and officers charged two other persons with impaired driving.

In Victoria, rowdyism was rampant.

"It was just one damn fight after another — we were chasing and fighting, fighting and chasing," a weary officer said this morning.

The tally: 14 youths in custody for being drunk in a public place and breach of peace.

All were released when they sobered up. In addition, two juveniles were charged with mischief for jumping on a car and causing about $400 damage.

The spokesman said officers never stopped running from one end of the city to the other — breaking up at least six rowdy house parties, two beach parties and a couple of fights that erupted on downtown streets.

One on Broad Street involved about 60 youths but the crowd dispersed when police arrived.

Another, at Douglas and Fisgard resulted in a 19-year-old youth getting slashed across the forehead.

The police spokesman said the unidentified youth stumbled into the police station and "bled all over our floor . . . we had to use a mop to clean it up."

The wounded youth was taken to Victoria General Hospital where he was treated and released. An investigation is continuing.

The situation was the same in Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

"It was just crazy, like Halloween," said an officer in normally quiet Oak Bay.

He said officers had their hands full dispersing youths on beaches and breaking up one particularly noisy house party.

Two youths spent the night in police cells for being drunk and a third was charged with possession of marijuana.

Esquimalt police were kept busy handling numerous domestic complaints and reports of loitering, wilful damage and drunkeness. Two drunks were held in police cells overnight.

Colwood RCMP had what one officer described as a normal Friday night.

He said the beaches were well patrolled and officers encountered no problems. There were no noisy house parties as well.

Still, officers made nine liquor seizures and took a 19-year-old youth into custody for being drunk.

His arrest brought the police officers their main source of entertainment for the night.

The youth jumped into the lagoon to get away from two arresting officers. As several other officers sat on a hill overlooking the scene, the two officers, their flashlights bobbing in the darkness, chased the youth up and down the shoreline.

Finally the officers gave up but some time later they spotted the bedraggled youth staggering up the road.

"It was almost like a full moon," the spokesman said.

Full moon isn't until next Wednesday.

Saanich police fire most

Saanich police discharge firearms in the line of duty more often than any other municipal police force in the province, statistics released by the B.C. Police Commission indicate.

Saanich officers fired 16 shots in 1978 and 12 shots in 1979. By comparison the Vancouver City force, which is eight times larger, recorded 11 and eight shots respectively.

Members of the Victoria force, the province's second largest municipal force, fired two shots in 1978 and three the following year.

The only force that fired more shots than Saanich, which has 115 officers, was the RCMP, which has 3,800 officers stationed in B.C.

The RCMP totals were 26 for 1978 and 63 for 1979.

Saanich deputy police chief Rick Avison refused Friday to give details on the shooting incidents.

He said every time a shot is fired in the line of duty the matter is thoroughly investigated by senior officers and that should be enough to satisfy public curiosity.

"I'm not concerned how many shots are fired in Vancouver, Delta or Matsqui. If shots are fired and there's a good reason for it — and as long as it is reported — there is no need to go into it further."

He said comparisons with other forces are unfair.

"All you're trying to do is sensationalize and show there are more shots fired in Saanich than anywhere else.

Probe condemns Dr. Pickup

VANCOUVER (CP) — Remote Alert Bay's lone physician is an alcoholic, his patients are over-treated, the hospital board has not acted responsibly and the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons over-protects its members.

Also, at least two patients other than Renee Smith, have died at St. George's Hospital because of Dr. Jack Pickup's errors in judgment or neglect.

These sweeping condemnations are contained in the report of a one-man federal inquiry into health services in Alert Bay, an isolated, predominantly native Indian community, on an island off the northeastern tip of Vancouver Island.

The report, by Dr. Gary Goldthorpe of Sioux Lookout, Ont., was released Friday by Bill Cranmer, spokesman for the Nimpkish Indian band, who said it confirms what Indians have been saying for the past two years concerning the inadequacy of their health care.

Goldthorpe was selected by the band and appointed by then-federal Health Minister David Crombie to conduct the review after an inquest jury decided Pickup was negligent in the death of Renee Smith, the 11-year-old Indian girl who died of a ruptured appendix.

Pickup later was cleared by the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Problems with health services at Alert Bay were further highlighted in January with the suicide of a man who had been impersonating a doctor in the community since November, 1979.

Robert Enrique Trujillo, 41, slashed his throat in the Port Hardy jail where he was being held after his masquerade as Dr. Robert Rifleman was discovered.

Goldthorpe said that 56 per cent of Alert Bay Indians die before the age of 40, and in Alert Bay an Indian stands a 25-per-cent greater chance of dying within the next year than does an Indian elsewhere in Canada.

The report also states that:

—Pickup is an alcoholic who needs treatment and who has been drunk many times while performing as

Civil servants a strange breed

OTTAWA (CP) — A survey to determine the public's real attitude toward civil servants by associating them with animals turned up these favorites: amoebas, turtles, snails and parasites.

Slow but reliable, concluded the firm which conducted the survey for the Public Service Alliance of Canada, the union representing about 175,000 public servants.

The union's headquarters is temporarily keeping a lid on the full results of the survey conducted by the New York-based Ernest Dichter and Associates Ltd. consulting firm even though one of its members has jumped the gun and published the main conclusion.

Joe Power, president of the Union of Nationale Defence Employees. published some of the results in an editorial in his union's latest monthly news publication, saying: "Believe it or not, the public holds a basic reservoir of goodwill towards public servants."

He said the firm, known for motivational research, surveyed 200 members of the public in 13 cities, 40 public servants in seven cities and 25 union officials, including 10 executives.

"In one segment of the study, the public was asked to play a word game in which public servants were symbolically matched with animals," Power said.

"The reasoning used by the survey firm was one where people who referred to public servants as lions generally see them as strong and powerful. People who called public servants turtles see them as slow."

Amoebas, turtles, snails and parasites, he said, were most often chosen from a list of 10 animals choices. The six other animals remain a mystery.

Power's office doesn't know what they were. A spokesman said Power used a preliminary report. Alliance spokesmen said they won't release other details to the public until they've informed their members through an internal publication.

The survey was commissioned by the alliance last fall in an effort to get advice on how the public image of government employees can be improved. Reports at the time said the union would spend about $49,000 on the survey.

"Well, I am not about to assist you. I haven't the time or resources to go over the reports. Frankly I don't think it is necessary."

Under section five of the firearms regulations of the Police Act, the chief constable is compelled to investigate the circumstances surrounding each case where a weapon is fired and submit a report to the chairman of the police board who "shall review and make any further inquires as necessary."

The board chairman has sole discretion over whether the reports should be made public.

He is required by the Police Act, however, to send the information to the Police Commission, but the commission only uses it for statistical purposes.

The statistics have been gathered province-wide since 1978. Figures for earlier years are not available.

They show that of the 16 shots fired in Saanich during 1978, 14 were intentional and two unintentional. Two persons were injured and $889.45 property damage done.

In 1979, 10 shots were intentional and two unintentional. Again, two persons were injured. No property damage was recorded.

Statistics for the RCMP show that in 1978, 26 members were involved; 24 of the shots were intentional and two unintentional. Service revolvers were used in 24 of the cases, shotguns in the other two. Two persons were killed and one wounded and $760.30 property damage was done.

In 1979, the RCMP fired 59 shots intentionally and four unintentionally. One person was killed and three injured and about $3,000 property damage done.

Figures for the municipal police forces are:

— West Vancouver: Nine shots in 1978 with one person injured and $200 damage; three shots in 1979 with no injuries or damage.

— Matsqui: One shot in 1978 to kill an injured sheep at request of owner; four shots in 1979 of which one was unintentional.

— Delta: None in both years.

— Vancouver: Eleven shots of which two were unintentional in 1978; eight in 1979 resulting in one injury.

— New Westminster: Six shots in 1978 with no injuries; none in 1979.

— Victoria: Two in 1978 and three in 1979 with no injuries or damages reported.

— Port Moody: None in 1979 (no figure for the previous year).

— Oak Bay: Eight shots in 1978, all against crows attacking residents; four shots in 1979.

Nelson and Esquimalt: Both reported two in 1978 and none in 1979.

Brig.-Gen. Vallola Fallahi, Iran's army commander, said there are probably more U.S. bases remaining in Iran besides the abandoned one near Tabas where the hostage rescue attempt was aborted Friday.

And Iran's interior minister, Ayatollah Mahdavi Kani, said the real aim of the U.S. mission was to take Iranian leaders hostage. He did not elaborate.

Tehran Radio said in addition to the bodies of four American servicemen, Iranian forces seized three of the helicopters left behind in the desert and bombed and strafed two others to prevent their being used by "dozens" of commandos it said were abandoned in the wasteland and being hunted by Iranian air force planes.

The broadcast did not say what happened to the two U.S. aircraft that became fiery tombs for the eight Americans reported killed in the mission, or what happened to the other four bodies. The Pentagon has said only the bodies were left behind, and that the more than 100 survivors of the mission were flown out.

State radio quoted Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh as saying that if similar missions are mounted, he will order oil industry workers to open the taps of the southwest Iranian oilfields and set the region ablaze.

As U.S. officials refused to rule out another rescue attempt, there was widespread speculation the voluntary members of the airborne rescue mission were not the only Americans involved in thefiasco.

According to military experts, an American ground task force has been in Tehran for some time, stationed and at the ready to help free the hostages.

They are also thought to be still in the country, their safety endangered.

Moreover, Egypt's usually reliable October Magazine reported today that the strike force also included 40 Iranian military cadets, who had been training in the United States. It gave no source for the report and did not elaborate.

With the element of surprise lost because of the ill-fated rescue strike, President Carter is being warned in Congress against trying any wider military adventures to gain the release of the U.S. hostages in Iran.

Meanwhile, a Kurdish leader appealed today for immediate international relief for the battered Kurdish people while heavy fighting raged on in four centres.

a doctor in St. George's Hospital.

—Most of Pickup's patients in St. George's have not had their medical histories recorded, physical examinations or progress notes taken during their hospital stay.

—Most patients admitted to St. George's do not require hospital care and many are kept in hospital too long.

—The hospital board failed to fulfil its responsibilities by not suspending Pickup's hospital privileges.

—The B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons acted inadequately and inappropriately in its dealings with the written complaints of Pickup's drunkenness on duty.

—The college, in considering the complaints, gave insufficient weight to its duty to protect the public and gave excessive weight in protecting the interests of the physician.

—Coroner William Deadman, because he is hospital board chairman, should not act as a coroner in any death occurring in the hospital of any person who has been a patient for three months before the death.

HOPING NO ONE gets their goat, 1½-year-old George Scott and his mother, Mrs. David Scott, 3912 Helen, make friends with their new-found pet which they have named Bridgette. Goat wandered onto their property and while the Scotts are prepared to return it to the rightful owner, they're crossing their fingers no one claims Bridgette because they have become attached to her.

Ferries back on rail Monday

CP Rail ferry operations between Vancouver and Vancouver Island will resume Monday following a tentative agreement reached Friday between the company and striking members of the Seafarers International Union.

The 60 employees went on strike March 24 putting a crimp in the shipment of freight to and from the Island.

The tentative two-year contract provides for a $1.08-an-hour increase retroactive to Jan. 1, another $1 an hour Jan. 1, 1981, and an additional 14 cents July 1, 1981.

A ratification vote by the employees is expected within two weeks.

The agreement affects seamen, storekeepers, oilers, water tenders and unlicensed engineroom staff.

Another 65 officers, members of the Canadian Merchant Service Guild were also on strike but have agreed to go back to work while negotiations continue in their contract dispute.

The Alaska cruise ship Princess Patricia will be drydocked Monday in preparation for its cruise season which begins May 15.

The strike idled two company ferries, the Carrier Princess and the Trailer Princess, as well as a leased, self-propelled barge, the Seaspan Doris.

The ships carry about 1,500 rail cars and 5,000 truck trailers every month between Vancouver and Nanaimo and 2,500 truck trailers between Vancouver and Swartz Bay.

Meanwhile, the B.C. Ferry Corp. will continue the extra ferry sailings it added to the Swartz Bay and Nanaimo runs until it has time to assess the change in traffic patterns caused by the settlement of the CP Rail strike.

The corporation added one run from Tsawwassen to Swartz Bay and later added three daily runs each day between Horseshoe Bay and Nanaimo to prevent shortages of persiahble goods which must be shipped from the Mainland.

"We'll leave things in place until we can assess what's taken place in the traffic patterns," corporation spokesman Bill Bouchard said Friday.

He said the extra sailings were well-used during the strike and noted that traffic begins to build about this time of year.

Comox school closed, mystery virus named

COMOX (CP) — Health officials in Courtenay now believe they have identified a mysterious virus which forced the closure of Comox elementary school on Friday.

Principal Marvin Watson sent 460 children home following the outbreak of a highly infectious disease that causes high fevers, vomiting and skin rashes. Sixteen cases have been reported at the school so far.

Dr. Ken Benson, medical health officer at the Upper Island Health Unit in Courtenay, said Friday the infection will most likely be traced to an echo virus.

But because the echo group contains a number of different viruses, Benson said proper identification cannot be made until results of test specimens are known. He said tests may take anywhere from 10 days to three weeks.

School officials first noticed symptoms in a grade 7 class earlier this week. Watson sent the class home Thursday, but closed the school Friday when students in other grades complained of the same ailment.

The afflicted children first complained of feeling ill which was followed by high fever, dry cough, flushed face and a skin rash developing in two to three days.

Benson said that although the virus is highly infectious for the 6- to 15-year-old age group, parents should not be unduly concerned.

Indian woes probe urged

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Bella Bella Indian councillors band, appalled at what it describes as the breakdown in the social fabric of the community, wants the federal and provincial governments to investigate the serious problems that afflict Indian reserves.

In a statement issued Friday, two days after the central coast band announced stern measures to eradicate bootleggers who sell to juveniles, the council declared the solution lies in the transfer of authority, responsibility and resources from governments to the bands.

The statement deplored "the unilateral recommendations by the provincial government to take over delivery of native health services in B.C."

And chief councillor Ed Newman, who is president of the Native Brotherhood of B.C., added in an interview:

"We want the provincial government to quit ignoring the problems of Indian people. We want it to quit ignoring us in decision-making."

Newman said there is nothing in the provincial budget for the Indian people who are trying to plan their own social and economic development.

Provincial Health Minister Rafe Mair announced in Victoria this week formation of a federal-provincial liaison committee to co-ordinate native health care.

The Bella Bella band disclosed Wednesday that bootleggers who are members of the community will be denied all services provided by the band and any who are employed by band enterprises will be cut from payrolls.

Several known bootleggers in the band were denied social allowances administered by the band in March.

As evidence of the social breakdown, the statement said the social assistance budget for the past fiscal year was $395,000 — "this is a community of 1,200 plus."

It also said a very high proportion of community members parade through the courts and jails, and that there is a three-month backlog of cases before the courts.

Housing is inadequate, with a 1977 analysis indicating a need for 112 new housing units.

Present programs available through the federal Indian affairs department are pre-packaged from the top down, but community-based planning and development is necessary to move in the direction of self-reliance, the statement said.

"The band-aid measures taken by council in combatting alcohol abuse within the community are remedial and stop-gap in nature," it added.

The enabling mechanism for self-reliance is a general development plan designed to meet the needs of the community as a whole, councillors said.

Child killer gets life

VANCOUVER (CP) — Louis Therriault, 32, of Vancouver was sentenced to life in prison after a B.C. Supreme Court jury found him guilty Friday of first-degree murder in the death of a four-year-old girl here last year.

He will not be eligible for parole until he has served at least 25 years of his life term.

Court had been told that Therriault took Olivia Olsen with him when he went to a store to get cigarettes early Oct. 13.

The girl's body was found later in a vacant lot.

Nurse report next week

VANCOUVER (CP) — Mr. Justice Henry Hutcheon completed talks Friday with representatives of government-employed nurses and the B.C. Government Employees Relations Bureau, and said he hopes to submit his report Wednesday to Labor Minister Jack Heinrich.

The B.C. Supreme Court judge was appointed as industrial inquiry commissioner April 15. His recommendations will be non-binding at the request of negotiators for the Registered Nurses Association of B.C. and the Registered Psychiatric Nurses of B.C., which represent the 2,700 nurses.

The sides agreed to the commission after the bureau and the nurses failed to reach an agreement. The nurses had taken limited job action.

Nurses are seeking a 39-per-cent wage raise over 27 months to make their pay comparable with general hospital nurses, who vote May 5 on an average 44 per cent increase over the same period.

Current base rate for the government-employed nurses, who work at health units and mental health facilities, is $1,361 a month. A 39-per-cent raise would give them a starting rate of $1,900 a month in 1982.

Once Canada's largest, North Shore paper folds

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The North Shore Citizen, once Canada's largest paid-circulation weekly newspaper, has closed after 22 years of publication.

The paper had been ailing for some time, losing circulation and cutting staff in an unsuccessful war with the twice-weekly tabloid North Shore News, which has a circulation of 55,000.

Publisher Norman Nicholl blamed economics and said 12 staffers in editorial, advertising and circulation were laid off.

Staff in the printing plant won't be affected because the Citizen is a branch of Horizon Publications, owned by Sterling Newspapers Ltd., and produces eight other Lower Mainland newspapers for the group.

Managing editor Dave Empey said employees had been expecting the closure for some time.

Laid-off workers, who had been given the news only that morning, worked Thursday, then broke open bottles of wine.

Cable cars urged in Vancouver core

The government should consider setting up a cable car system of transport in downtown Vancouver, Jack Davis (SC — North Vancouver-Seymour) said Friday.

He said an Areobus system is cheaper to install than rail or light rapid transit systems, is more energy efficient and would not disrupt normal traffic patterns.

Davis said the system, developed in Switzerland, utilizes electric-motorized cable cars capable of carrying 50 to 100 persons on a horizontal cable supported by slender pylons high above street traffic.

"It, in effect, flies over the traffic," he said in the legislature.

Davis suggested the link be started at the southern terminus of the Seabus terminal and connect with Gastown, Granville Island and the proposed B.C. Place development.

Another feature of the Areobus, Davis said, is that it can be taken down and erected elsewhere.

Monorail offered

The Boeing Corp., of Seattle has offered to build a 2.5-kilometre monorail linking the Whalley area of Surrey and New Westminster, B.C. as a free demonstration project, Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Friday.

The monorail, which Vander Zalm said would cost $12 million, would be built on condition the government pay for it if the project were successful and the monorail became permanent. If not, Boeing would dissassemble the monorail at no cost.

City students win degrees

Two Victoria students have graduated from Western Washington University.

Jill Chudleigh received her bachelor of arts degree at the Bellingham university, and Cameron J. Ross attained a perfect grade point average of four.

Mercury spill bared month later

SPOKANE (UPI) — The Washington Department of Ecology was notified Friday of a possible spill of a mercury compound into the Columbia River at a smelter in Trail, B.C.

A report from the province's Ministry of Environment indicated the spill of some 6,000 pounds of a sludge-like material occurred March 19 or 20 at the Cominco Smelter, but was not reported to Canadian authorities until Friday.

It was believed the sludge-like material contained mercury, or else a mercury compound such as mercury sulfate.

Word of the spill was passed on to the Environmental Protection Agency in Seattle, which notified DOE and the state Department of Social and Health Services, which would have responsibility for checking drinking water intakes from the river.

It was not immediately known how many such intakes exist downstream of Trail, which is located about 16 kilometers north of the U.S. border.

"The element of concern is the mercury," said John Arnquist, Spokane regional manager for the Department of Ecology, whose region includes Ferry, Stevens and Pend Oreille counties.

Lasting proposition.

A good deal better for a good deal longer.

When you compare the car you get with the price you pay, the Volkswagen Rabbit is an honest proposition. And not just when you buy it, but as you drive it for years to come.

The Rabbit is designed and built to take the bumps out of roads, the sting out of gas prices, the bite out of weather, and put the joy back in driving.

Come in soon and listen to our lasting proposition.

Intensive forestry

The chief forester of MacMillan Bloedel, Grant Ainscough, paid an unusual tribute recently to the handful of B.C. conservationists who have been pushing the provincial government and its forest service for reform.

He said that groups like the Sierra Club and guides and outfitters associations had an inordinately loud voice in the provincial government's recent decision to upgrade forest managment techniques.

Although the largest forest company in the province is big enough to recognize the contribution of these groups, it is also clear that far more public understanding and concern are necessary before the foundation of B.C.'s economy will be able to live up to its potential.

The five-year forest review and analysis tabled by the Forests Minister Tom Waterland last month painted an uncertain future as the industry makes the inevitable transition from old to second growth forests. Timber shortages in some areas have begun now and there will be more within five years.

The report said the key to long term stability was better forest management, better tree farming techniques, better wood utilization. All of those goals are wrapped up in the term 'intensive forestry.'

According to Ainscough, there is no question of the value of intensive forestry as long as the industry retains the flexibility to react to market demands. But he noted that intensive forestry won't work unless the public demands that politicans give the forest service the money to do the job.

If the 20 or so people who showed up for the meeting at which Ainscough spoke were any indication, no outpouring of public concern is imminent. But when you consider that forestry employs 10 per cent of B.C.'s workforce, supports an annual $2 billion payroll and contributes $575 million a year to provincial revenues every, British Columbians should see its continued vitality as a major priority.

The B.C. government has laid out a $1.4 billion five-year budget for forestry to begin lessening the gap between dwindling old growth forests and the regeneration of second growth.

The dramatic effect intensive forestry can have on productivity and jobs was explained at the same meeting by another forester, Rudy Kind. He said that in Europe, where forest lands are intensively managed, the industry averages 2.4 cubic meters of lumber per hectare. In B.C., our forest industry averages 1.5 cubic meters per hectare.

In Switzerland 10,000 people are employed in silviculture and log harvesting. In B.C. about 23,000 people work at the same jobs. He says that if Switzerland's ratio of workers to forest land was the same here, 500,000 people would be employed.

With that kind of potential, it's hard to believe that the University of B.C. is looking for students to fill vacancies in the foresty faculty. Do students who see no future in the forests know something the rest of us should?

Emotional power of English

QUEBEC — An English-speaking Montreal businessman recalled the other day how he had once gone to see Rene Levesque about a government contact.

It was back in the early 60s when Levesque was Natural Resources Minister in the Liberal government of Jean Lesage and was building himself a reputation as an outspoken Quebec nationalist.

"The meeting was very short," recalled this member of Montreal's Anglo establishment. "He told us he was sorry but he couldn't give us the job because we were English."

That's one image of Rene Levesque: a man who has never been able to shake his hangup about Quebec anglophones.

Two images

But 10 years later, when radicals in the Parti Quebecois wanted to abolish the English language school system, it was Levesque who stood up and said no.

That's the other image of Levesque: a democrat, whose roots in an English-speaking Gaspe town have kept him closer to English Quebecers than any of his colleagues are.

As a politician, Levesque has always had problems dealing with the English fact in Quebec. And those problems are surfacing again in the referendum campaign.

With the French-speaking community split on the referendum question, the 20 per cent non-francophone community holds the balance of power in the vote on whether to negotiate sovereignty-association.

The prospect that the English and immigrant communities could deny French Quebecers the right to self-determination is haunting Levesque.

The separatist temperature in the province may rise again if French Quebecers perceive that Quebec's aspirations have once again been stifled by "the dominant minority."

Levesque is aware that violence is a possibility too. "Whatever the result will be, on the day after the referendum we will still have to live together," he said before the campaign began.

But the other side of Levesque is starting to emerge in the heat of battle.

After an opinion poll was published last Sunday showing the Yes side less than 1 per cent ahead of the No forces with 17 per cent of voters still undecided, Levesque's tone of voice grew harder and more bitter.

In a steamy school gymnasium in his home riding of Taillon, he warned that the English establishment, trying to preserve its dominance, "will panic and will try as much as possible to condition the English voters with frightening excesses."

There was some ugliness in the air when Levesque read out a newspaper quote from a Roumanian woman who had survived 12 years of torture in a Communist prison camp and worried the same thing would happen in Quebec under the PQ.

Levesque was right to be angry because it is wildly excessive to compare sovereignty-association with a communist dictatorship. But the way he handled the incident turned the crowd against Quebec's immigrant community.

The immigrants and the English will mostly be voting No, Levesque told them. "That is why it's more important than ever for us to stick together."

The "us against them" argument is one of the most powerful weapons at Levesque's disposal. But he has to use it cautiously if he is really serious about keeping the social peace in Quebec.

English exploiters

In one breath, he talks about "the English exploiters" — the owners of newspaper and TV stations who are using their power to "manipulate and condition" non-francophones into voting No. What they are doing is "contemptuous and insulting" to French Quebecers.

In another breath, he says "not every anglophone is a millionaire" and "there are some anglophones who will rise above all this and vote Yes. It will take a damn lot of courage."

Levesque cannot run his campaign on the backs of the English but he can't ignore the emotional power of the issue either; two conflicting attitudes which show how Quebec anglophones are both the reason and the curse of the PQ's existence.

The cream visits Brandon

BRANDON, Man. — A few months ago, Pierre Berton and Vancouver broadcaster Jack Webster were swooping down in a small float plane on Webster's estate on the Gulf Islands.

"If this kite crashes," Berton observed, "all the headlines in the East will say: 'Berton killed, Webster also dies.'

"All the headlines in the West will say: 'Webster killed, Berton also perishes.'"

I was thinking about this Thursday while in a tiny Cessna bucketing from Winnipeg to Brandon, and carrying Harrison Salisbury, associate editor of the New York Times, along with CBC Washington correspondent Joe Schlesinger, while the snow from the top of the ice that still covers Lake Winnipeg stretched off toward the Artic Circle.

Real puzzle

The only headline that came to mind was: "Three journalists die in ice in late April."

The search for the appropriate obituary was second only to the real puzzle. How can a high school conference in Brandon attract Harrison Salisbury, Joe Schlesinger, Hon. Paul Martin, Ken Dryden, CBC host Roy Bonisteel, poet John Robert Colombo and W-5's Henry Champ.

There has to be something else than the Cessnas. It is one of the larger secrets of Canadian journalism but Mosaic Massey, a conference-cum-festival, is a rather boggling effort run by the students and staff of a high school, Vincent Massey High.

This — all news to me — is in its seventh year, and it attracts some 800 high school and university students and educators from northern Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and the adjoining U.S. states.

Everybody sneaks in now.

I hope they all didn't use the Cessna, but Mosaic Massey in its short history has attracted such as Alvin Toffler, Buckminster Fuller, Ralph Nader, Marshall McLuhan, W. O. Mitchell, Irving Layton, Knowlton Nash.

What is interesting is not the list of expense-account celebrities, but the reaction with the kids who do it all and sustain it.

This intrigues, because the traveller is coming immediately from the conference of the four western Canadian premiers in Lethbridge where, as recounted here the other day, there was a niggling emphasis on resources-and-money and a sad lack of a broader concern for items that can't be listed in the counted house.

By contrast with the power struggle among the princelings, it's nice to hear the 16-year-olds get up and question intelligently Harrison Salisbury, author of 18 books and famous for his Moscow dispatches for the New York Times, about the current situation in Yugoslavia.

Schlesinger, who escaped from Czechoslovakia but luckily not his delicious accent and who some think is the best TV corresponent anywhere, spoke movingly (and truthfully) of the relatively petty problems Canadians face as opposed to the world he visits.

This surprising collection of ideas stumbled upon in a town in the poorest of the four Western provinces has extended beyond hired speakers.

The Winnipeg Symphony is here, so is the Air Command Band and Spring Thaw has been folded into the prog[illegible]

Each year, they bring in something like the third most beautiful woman in Canada, classical guitarist Liona Boyd, the Moscow Circus clowms, that famed Canadian duo of Duck Donald and Cathy Fink and what else.

If the meandering mandarins of Ottawa don't know where Brandon is, Harrison Salisbury now does, plus the other guests who went away, impressed with how much goes on in places you've never heard of.

Panic calls

In the middle of the night there came some panic phone calls.

Jimmy Carter, proving once again that his true Peter Principle may indeed have been the peanut farm, had done his own unique version of the Entebbe raid.

Schlesinger, grumbling and with an ailing hip, responded to CBC headquarters and chartered a Cessna, the first small step on the road to Tehran.

Harrison Salisbury cancelled his weekend at his retreat in Connecticut and raced back to New York.

For once: Justice. The daring of Brandon has been matched by a news event that demonstrated it had attracted the cream.

Critical coal talks

In the past week a number of representatives of the Japanese steel industry have been seen in the B.C. legislative buildings, negotiating with government officials on the possibility of increased coal exports to Japan.

Little has been made public, aside from a couple of remarks by Economic Development Minister Don Phillips that he is "optimistic" an agreement will soon be reached.

In fact, the negotiations are probably some of the most important the government will undertake. A successful outcome will greatly enhance the province's economic future from now until 1995 or even later. A failure will probably put paid to all chances of major new metallurgical coal developments — and the economic benefits they would bring — for at least a decade.

At stake is the future of the northeast coal fields — the massive deposits of metallurgical coal best used as the coking coal necessary to the steel-making process. The deposits are centred in the more remote parts of northeastern B.C. The nearest existing community to them is Chetwynd.

A development of the fields would bring substantial employment benefits to B.C. In the beginning, the construction industry would have to build not only the mines themselves but also the infrastructure necessary to support the development — roads, rail lines, and probably even "instant towns" near the mine sites. Once operational, the mines themselves would continue to employ hundreds, and spin-off effects would provide thousands more jobs.

The benefits of the development would spin across the north. It would probably be the single project that could guarantee the upgrading of the Prince Rupert port into a modern superport, comparable with Vancouver. The coal trains moving from the fields to the port would require the development of a regional rail centre, perhaps at Terrace.

All the coal would be shipped abroad, bringing valuable yen to B.C. and Canada. Since it does not appear likely that B.C. could itself support a steel mill, the exporting would not mean the loss of any Canadian jobs that could occur by keeping the coal in the country.

There's just one snag in the whole scenario: money. Front money to pay for the tremendous costs of opening up the area with roads and infrastructure and building the port facilities.

The costs would be such that B.C. needs a guarantee of a stable market in Japan before it could take the risk. The government is looking for a contract committing the Japanese steel firms to buying so-many tons a year before it will go ahead with the development. And Ottawa is insisting on such a contract before it will even consider committing federal economic development funds to help finance the porject. The current figure being considered is somewhere in the vicinity of five million tons per year.

The Japanese, on the other hand, want a guarantee of a secure supply before they will agree to buy from Canada. Some observers suggest the Japanese believe Canada is not known as a particularly reliable supplier of export goods, what with overcrowded ports, dock strikes and other domestic transportation troubles. A commitment by both federal and provincial authorities to the Prince Rupert port development might be one way of assuring the Japanese of Canadian sincerity, it is suggested.

This is not the first time the northeast coal fields have been on the brink of development. Similar discussions with the Japanese went on a few years ago, but no agreement was reached because of a slump in the steel industry plus aggressive marketing campaigns from other nations.

This time around the situation is more critical. For one thing, the Japanese businessmen in B.C. this week are negotiating on behalf of virtually the entire Japanese steel industry. Previously some negotiations were done on a company-by-company basis, which gave B.C. more opportunities to win an agreement.

Also, this is probably the last negotiating time for a decade or more. The Japanese are looking for a supply of coal to cover the decade 1984-1994. If they reach an agreement — with B.C. or elsewhere in the world — they will need no more in that time.

The potential is such that neither the B.C. nor the federal government should leave any stone unturned in an effort to find an agreement that will meet the Japanese needs while providing the economic benefits to this province.

The wooden-heads

BOSTON — It was Patriot's Day and, in my city, runners by the thousands plunged down the last yards of this year's marathon, flanked by cheering crowds and honor guards of magnolia trees.

Only a mile away, in my own garden, there was another sort of spectacle. The tulips that I unceremoniously planted last fall, one step ahead of the frost, had forgiven my haste and were open to the sun.

It was such a glorious day that I wanted to wallow in it, to soak it up through my skin and eyes and think of nothing else. I wanted to be like the Iranian woman who said of the hostages, "It really doesn't have anything to do with me. I mean, life goes on, doesn't it?"

But it wasn't possible. The world had intruded.

Since last week, when President Carter threatened "military action" in Iran, and the notion of a mid-May deadline became public, I have been less certain that life goes on.

I cannot figure it, this foreign policy. I cannot find a responsible argument which shows me how this "military action" will free the hostages. I cannot find anyone who truly believes that our deadlines will frighten the Iranians into moderation.

It seems to me that threatening the ayatollah with military action is like threatening a masochist with torture. A holy war is the briar patch of the Iranian revolutionaries. And we stand here warning them that we may throw them into it.

The "military" scenarios I have heard have endings that range from the murder of the hostages to the annihilation of the world. The political power plays that I have read portray — at best — an anti-American Iran turned into a pro-Soviet Iran. With mines and blockades we can only turn a tragedy into a catastrophe.

Yet we behave as if our timetables and plans will elicit a reasonable response. We have chosen the escalator of ultimatums as our vehicle, and on it we move closer and closer to war.

So I spent that day not so much frightened as furious. Furious at the leaders on all sides who raise antes when they should be lowering anxieties.

It occurred to me that I am livid at the sheer "wooden-headedness" of those in power. This is historian Barbara Tuchman's word and she uses it well in this week's Esquire. In an article that minces no words, she travels across the centuries she has known best, from the calamitous 14th century and our own 20th, chronicling the catastrophic mistakes of leaders, and contemplating the reason: sheer wooden-headedness.

Wooden-headedness, says Tuchman, "consists of assessing a situation in terms of preconceived fixed notions while ignoring or rejecting any contrary signs. It is acting according to wish while not allowing oneself to be confused by the facts."

It is choosing to appear strong, rather than to be right. It is being consistent in the pursuit of bad judgment, and maintaining a fixed idea at all costs. And it is, she says, the virtual hallmark of men in power.

No, it is not, in my view, exclusively male — Indira Ghandi is a star in the field — and not exclusively American. But it is an historic hallmark of the powerful in this current foreign debacle.

The ayatollah is the classic immovable force. Writes Tuchman: "No wooden-headedness is so impenetrable as that of a religious zealot. Because he is connected with a private wire to the Almighty, no idea coming in on a lesser channel can reach him."

The leadership of the Soviet Union is another example of her belief that "men somehow equate being wrong with being impotent." If Afghanistan is Russia's Vietnam, it is because Kremlin leaders also persist in mistakes with an impressive strength of purpose.

In our current policy encounters, then, we stand with at least two other leaders: an Iranian unable to even conceive of being in error; a Soviet leadership that views its own and all other admissions of error as signs of impotence.

And so, we too, terrified of being seen as weak, embark on a plan to prove ourselves equally wooden-headed.

Tuchman chronicled all this before in her account of that most wilful, unnecessary war — World War I. "In public affairs," Woodrow Wilson said then, "stupidity is more dangerous than knavery."

On a perfect day, full of life's riches, I agree with Tuchman's ominous words: "It begins to appear as if mankind may be approaching a . . . stage of suicidal incompetence."

Olympic gold a debased metal

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN
An Editorial

We have reached a watershed in the Olympic boycott debate, and now the nature of that debate changes. For more than three months the argument has been a misgotten mess — an idea dreamed up by a few American sports writers, seized on by an American president who gives the distressing impression of making up foreign policy as he goes along; an idea of extreme political naivety and dismal immediate impact; an idea precisely calculated (if anybody was actually calculating) to produce the maximum Western disarray at a time where maximum Western solidarity was needed.

Those three miserable months, however, are over. Mrs. Thatcher has put her case to the athletes and (for the most part) come up with a raspberry. Cyrus Vance has journeyed to Lake Placid and come up with a raspberry ice. President Carter has been forced to the most abject extremities and moral blackmail to make his writ run. The boycott notion is already a fiasco. It has distracted attention from Afghanistan itself, handed the Soviet authorites a succession of propaganda coups and stressed painfully the splits in an alliance of free and democratic peoples. A bungle. But now — in one major respect — also a fact.

The American team will not compete in Moscow this summer. That, after last weekend's grudging vote, is almost a certainty. Not quite a certainty because some — foreseeable — Russian troop withdrawals from Afghanistan in May might tempt an administration electorally hungry for success to slam the reverse levers and claim triumphs.

But let us assume that this slim scenario does not happen, that Soviet troops continue in their springtime offensive to bomb, strafe and gas the Afghan fighters and that there is no early prospect of any pullback. The U.S. will not be in Moscow. Nor will Canada or Kenya be there. Nor — and here one moves into the realm of imminent prophesy — will Holland, West Germany, Australia, New Zealand, China and even France.

At once the import of the Games is changed. They will go on and still — in the number of Third World countries — represent a substantial defeat for the West when totted up against January's UN vote. They will still impinge scantily on Russian public opinion. Lenin's birthday is a much bigger cavalcade.

But, in sheer sporting terms, the games themselves are already a pretty pointless charade. The equestrian championships without the British are barely worth the winning. The sprints, without the Americans, are a string of putty medals. The middle-distance races, without the Kenyans and the New Zealanders, have lost their glory. The swimming, without the U.S. and the Australians, will be merely an eastern bloc affair.

One can go through the schedule, race by race, match by match, and calculate already that about half the point of the Games — from the sportsmen's view — is dissipated. Winning a medal next July will not mean any more than winning a medal in some random regional tournament. Olympic gold is a debased metal.

That does not mean (as Mrs. Thatcher has discovered) that any pull-back from participation will be easily achieved. There will still be plenty of sportsmen who have trained so long for these Games that they would seek to be there even if they were the only competitors left. But it does also mean, for many thinking competitors, that the reason for defiance is much eroded. The medals will be worth little, therefore why pretend — in defiance of governmental advice — that they are the highest prizes around?

Most of the broader arguments remain specious and emotive. Moscow 1980 will not be Berlin before the war. The Russian people's eyes will not suddenly be opened to the perfidy of Afghanistan. Of course governments are being desperately hypocritical by trading happily while urging boycotts. Of course, given a year or two, unless the world is to swing off its axis, we all have a vital interest in the restoration of some form of detente. But the immediate reality is the Games and their practical significance.

If America is not there, that significance is greatly diminished. As other nations join — and they will — it shrinks further. Western athletes, surrounded by a shrinking feeling, may consider themselves unfairly victimized. But the thought of competing in a Russian stadium against Russion soldier-sportsmen — athletes detached from strafing duty in Afghanistan perhaps — has always been a queasy one.

The Games would be worth sportsmen fighting for, as sport, if they could emerge intact. They are not intact, though; they must appear fatally damaged in the eyes of those athletes who seek the heights of competition because they believe that they are the best and know an Olympic medal is the only definitive proof for their belief.

'Letting off political steam'

By SIDNEY LENS
The Nation

President Carter's reaction to the Soviet invasion of Afganistan was to heighten world tensions. The Russians certainly deserve to be castigated for invading Afghanistan, but President Carter's escalation of tensions is not only useless but counterproductive. Short of World War III and the almost certain annihilation of the human race, there is nothing Washington can do to dislodge Soviet troops from an area so close to home. The huffing and puffing that comes out of the White House accomplishes nothing except to let off a little political steam.

If the present Administration really wants to get the Russians out of Afghanistan perhaps it ought to give up the tack of escalation, in favor of a plan for de-escalation. That does not mean turning the other cheek; it means offering a plan that will favor both sides. Suppose, for instance, that Mr. Carter offered the Russians the following deal:

(1) You get out of Afghanistan immediately.

(2) We will indefinitely postpone deploying the 572 Pershing and Cruise missiles scheduled to be placed in Western Europe next year.

We can already hear the hawks' cry: "They'll be getting far more out of this deal than we will." But that argument is not convincing. The president has said that the invasion of Afghanistan is the worst crisis since World War II. Isn't ending the "worst crisis" worth a major concession on the part of the United States?

And what does Washington really lose by not placing those devilish weapons in Western Europe? Absolutely nothing! The United States can destroy the Soviet Union at least thirty times over just by dispatching missiles from the United States itself. The only value of the Pershings and Cruises would be that the Russians probably would aim more of their own missiles against those new silos in Europe.

In the end, however, nothing would change: all the threats, embargoes and Olympic boycotts cannot alter the basic fact that neither side can win a world war.

For those who have an ingrained fear of de-escalation, one might recall that in April 1958 Nikita Khrushchev announced a unilateral cessation of nuclear tests and urged President Eisenhower to join the Russian initiative. Though Washington demurred for some months, public opinion brought about American participation in the test ban before the year was out, and in 1963 the two nations signed a partial test ban treaty.

We are treading perilous waters these days. There is too much loose talk of wars, "little wars" to be sure, but wars that can very well move on to the holocaust that World War III is certain to be. What the world needs is softer talk, and unilateral initiatives to de-escalate tensions, not raise them.

Letters to the editor

Rules needed

As a former member of the Advisory Planning Commission I agree wholeheartedly with the comments of former mayor Mr. Peter Pollen.

I cannot see why Mayor Tindall would even consider anyone to act on the APC who is involved in development, construction, or supplying services to the above, or could benefit from zoning changes in any way, shape or form on a direct basis.

Surely the chairman of APC has some rules or guidelines to follow at public meetings. The public should be advised before the meeting starts what the rules are. Or are they made up as the meeting progresses? The Inner Harbor zoning change meeting was a fiasco. — Maxwell Hopper, 711-450 Simcoe Street.

Already separate

I recently suggested "federal and provincial representatives must as individuals and not as party hacks, state their stand on Quebec separation." It is gratifying to know the B.C. Legislature is going to act on this matter, hopefully regardless of party discipline.

May I be permitted to make a few statements for our politicians to consider:

At the root of Canada's sickness lies Quebec; Quebec has already separated but nothing has been signed.

The rule of the majority seemingly does not count when it concerns Quebec as against the rest of Canada.

Other races have acceded to assimilation and use English for business, reserving their own cultural language for social events within their racial groupings.

The federal Liberals are keen on bilingualism as it supports their political supremacy with 74 seats in Quebec. The opposition is afraid to challenge this as they will be accused of bigotry and bias, whereas this really lies with the French to cover their own inadequacies by demanding special privileges and status.

In the services, military and civil, you do not require brains or seniority, just be French and have job preference.

Speaking of a founding race, who built Western Canada? Newfoundland, Ontario and the Maritimes — certainly not the French.

The French were content to build their little settlements in Quebec and now complain that British and American brains with risk capital own 90 per cent of their province.

If anybody is to be faulted for our dilemma in this matter, it must be the politicians of other cultures who have been hypnotized and brainwashed by Trudeau, especially the Liberals who deny their own national heritage for politcal expediency.

Why has the francophone language, culture and heritage to be preserved in all of Canada to the neglect of others which make up this country?

Which do you prefer, a separate Quebec or a separate Western Canada? This option is becoming evident.

Must this fabricated emancipation of the French language be made at the expense of national unity and victimization of others who are not French?

I wonder if Trudeau, Levesque and now Ryan congratulate each other for putting on such a good show. — Ken Burns, 401,640 Dallas Road.

Welfare no cure

Welfare has been a necessary service to our people but it is no cure for Canada's basic problems and ultimately may increase them to the point where both welfare and the economic system itself could be brought down.

The trouble is that more and more is being taken from those earning and given to those who are not, and as the percentage of the latter continues to increase, the burden on the former, whose numbers keep on decreasing, will finally become intolerable. Administrative costs have also expanded and the method used to reduce them is to have less checking done and to rely more and more on the honesty and good faith of the recipients. Generally speaking, it is good but there are always deadbeats to be found and weeded out, with a tendency for their number to increase as time goes on.

One thing which keeps welfare costs up is that payments are in some cases higher than can be obtained by taking many of the jobs offered. That is particularly true where children are involved, for the private employer pays for the work done while welfare bases its payments on how many there are in the family. To me the solution appears to be to put the greatest emphasis on creating employment rather than merely restricting ourselves to relieving it. People without funds have to be helped, of course, but not to the point where it pays them to seek either unemployment insurance or welfare rather than work. — F. L. P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Small Business Administrators.

Looking to streamline your business procedures without financial strain? Here are two small business administrators with prices for the Model 1 starting under $14,000.*

They will administer your daily business needs in BASIC, COBOL, FORTRAN or Pascal. And, there's hardware and software for batch data communications. Further, since all DS990 computers are compatible, you can upgrade without fear of losing your software investment.

Both the single station Model 1 and the dual station Model 2 feature our double-sided, double-density diskette storage system. This means that you have increased space on each diskette for business information. In fact, it's four times the storage space of comparably priced, conventional diskette systems.

With all this capability you get the same worldwide service and technical support that led to TI's appointment as the official computer and calculator company of the 1980 Olympic Winter Games.

For more information, contact your nearest TI Sales office or write: Texas Instruments Incorporated, Digital Systems Division, 41 Shelley Rd., Richmond Hill, Ontario L4C 5G4.

company reports

Suncor Inc.

Suncor Inc.'s earnings rose to $87.3 million or $1.66 a share in the first quarter of this year, compared with $18.8 million or 35 cents in the similar 1979 period.

Revenue rose to $291.3 million from $173.9 million.

Lornex

Citing higher prices for molybdenum, copper and silver, Lornex Mining Corp. Ltd. of Vancouver has reported net earnings for the first quarter of 1980 of $27.9 million, more than three times the total of $8.4 million in the same period last year.

The company also declared a dividend of $1 a common share for the quarter ending March 31.

TIW Industries

High interest rates and slumps in the auto and furniture industries resulted in a first-quarter loss for TIW Industries Ltd., the company says.

TIW reported a loss of $104,000, or minus six cents a share, for the first quarter ending March 31, a whopping slump from a profit of $1.1 million, or 53 cents a share, a year earlier.

Sales were $27.4 million in the first quarter, up from $24.2 million a year ago.

Weldwood

First-quarter earnings for Weldwood of Canada Ltd. were only about one-third the level of the corresponding period last year, company shareholders were told.

Net earnings declined to $3.8 million or 78 cents a share from from $10.6 million or $2.15 a share in the first three months of 1979.

Last year, Weldwood had record net income, up 14 per cent to $35.4 million or $7.18 a share from $31.1 million or $6.32 a share in 1978.

VICTORIA PRESS

A. Peter Dorazio

Colin D. McCullough, vice-president, is pleased to announce the appointment of A. Peter Dorazio as Controller of Victoria Press.

Mr. Dorazio, a graduate of the University of British Columbia and Michigan Technological University, joined the company in 1971 and has been Business Manager since 1975.

In his new position, he will be responsible for financial administration and labor relations at Victoria Press, which publishes The Daily Colonist and Victoria Times, and will also be involved in policy development.

A golden handshake in Pleasantville

PLEASANTVILLE, N.Y. (AP) — Martin Scheiner said he wasn't playing Santa Claus when he sent gifts totalling $1.5 million to his 600 former employees. It was the least he could do, he said, for the people who helped make him rich.

Thirty years ago in his New York City living room, Scheiner founded a small medical electronics firm.

Over the years, his Electronics for Medicine grew into a multimillion-dollar industry and moved to this Westchester County community. Last September the firm was purchased by Honeywell Inc. for an undisclosed amount, and Scheiner and his wife, Ann, moved to Tortola in the British Virgin Islands.

Last week, the workers began receiving hand-addressed letters from their former boss. The letters read: "Ann and I want to share our good fortune with you. The enclosed cheque is our gift to you. The taxes have been paid by us.

"It was not by accident that E. for M. grew from the small company which I started 30 years ago to the respected organization which Honeywell bought last year," Scheiner wrote. "This success was due to the efforts of all of you who worked with me over the years."

Enclosed with each letter was a cheque amounting to $50 for each month the employee had worked for Scheiner. Several employees got $20,000, and the gifts were estimated to total $1.5 million.

Luis and Margarita Suarez, who together worked for the company for 33 years, received approximately $20,000. Suarez, who is blind, said he would use some of the windfall to buy special glasses equipped with a sonar guidance device.

Maverick U.K. Tory dies at 85

LONDON (AP) — Irene Baroness Ward, a maverick Conservative politician who served in Parliament longer than any other British woman, died in a London nursing home Saturday at the age of 85. Cause of death was not announced.

Miss Ward was first elected to Parliament in 1931, seven years after being defeated in her first bid for elected office. She held that seat for 14 years until 1945.

Five years later, she was returned to the House of Commons and held that seat until February of 1974, when she was made a life peeress. She remained active in politics from the House of Lords.

She never married.

Refugee fleet in trouble as high waves hit straits

Times News Services

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — The U.S. Coast Guard called in cutters from all along the eastern seaboard, but was "swamped" with emergency calls today as Cuban refugees attempting to reach a new life in the United States found their ragtag freedom fleet overwhelmed by high seas.

Coast guard personnel from as far away as Massachusetts and Virginia poured into Key West on Friday and were kept busy retrieving sinking or disabled boats that tried to cut through two-metre waves in the straits between Cuba and Florida.

"We're totally swamped," said spokesman Lou Merc. "We've got so many radio calls, and we're just so short-handed, we can only answer the emergencies."

The coast guard spokesman expressed fear that the inexperience of some boat captains transporting the refugees across the 145-kilometre strait might lead to deaths.

"It's going to be rough sailing," said Key West Port Director Francisco Veliz. "I wouldn't go in any (boat) less than 30 feet long."

Authorities predicted that high seas today would slow the influx of refugees from Cuba which has swelled the population of this resort town of 29,000 by a third.

On Friday, 466 Cubans arrived aboard five boats, bringing the number of newcomers to more than 1,800 since Wednesday.

In a surprise development, the Cuban government has encouraged planes from the United States to fly in for pickup of emigrants.

Friday's official Granma newspaper announced on page one that small American aircraft could land at the airport in the resort of Varadero, 145 kilometres east of Havana.

"One U.S. plane already landed yesterday at Havana airport," the paper said, and its pilot was informed that the airlift could proceed" from Varadero, "provided this was done in an orderly fashion and planes sent advance notice."

The rush by relatives and friends to bring the exiles to the United States was spurred by slow progress in official efforts to evacuate more than 10,000 refugees who swarmed into the Peruvian Embassy at Havana in pursuit of asylum.

'Sick world getting sicker'

TORONTO (CP) — The father of the Club of Rome says he is more pessimistic than ever about the future and predicts that an already ailing world will get sicker in the 1980s.

In 1968, Aurelio Peccei convened a meeting of 100 of the world's finest scientific minds and set them to predicting the world's most pressing long-term problems.

Peccei, a 72-year-old Italian millionaire, says most of the club's predictions have come true. In a recent interview, he said that people must make the world more governable by reorganizing themselves into regional blocs.

"The over-riding goal is to produce a mature, responsible, self-governing and well-managed global community which, while preserving cultural identities and social dynamics, should give the conscience of the species precedence over national and class conscience," he said.

"The world is in a much worse condition than it was 10 years ago, and it's going to get worse." Peccei has spent the last 12 years travelling the world to try to provoke debate on the problems of population growth, the environment, industrialization and the growing gap between rich and poor nations.

In 1968, the Club of Rome futurists made a decade-long series of predictions. They were based on the conclusion that the world was managing itself badly, wasting resources, polluting and over-populating itself, and bent on such rapid growth that it would eventually strangle civilization.

Peccei cites current problems of increasing violence, depleted energy resources, military buildups, economic difficulties and continuing over-population as proof that the club's concerns were accurate.

He challenges anyone to indicate a single major area of human advance where things are better than they were 10 years ago.

"The world has only 10 years left to prevent the time bomb of unemployment and population growth from exploding in violence," said Peccei, an economist and former head of Fiat and Olivetti corporations.

"We are now heading into a more complex and difficult decade. There are too many forces outside our control and things are too complex now to predict."

He said a rapidly-growing population is the biggest problem the world faces.

"Today there are 4.5 billion people in the world . . . between now and the end of the century there will be two billion more. There is not enough resources on the planet to care for them, so if the population is not controlled we will not be able to control anything else."

Planning act in the works

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Friday a planning act to help end disputes like the shopping centre battle between Saanich and the Capital Regional District will be ready soon.

Vander Zalm stressed the legislation won't just be aimed at junior levels of government but will also take into consideration the variety of planning activities carried out by the provincial government.

Under the legislation, provincial planners would do the broad brush work while municipalities would add the detail.

Vander Zalm made the comments during taping of Capital Comment for CHEK and CTV television, which will be broadcast this weekend.

The minister said he was not suggesting creation of a new ministry of planning.

"We should be able to make the system we have work without taking away any powers from municipalities. In fact, if it goes the way I think it should, the municipalities would be strengthened."

The planning act, he suggested, may contain changes in the way voting strength at regional board level is decided.

Currently some matters are decided by weighted votes, where votes of members from highly populated areas carry more impact than votes from members of less populated areas.

Vander Zalm said the idea for the planning act developed out of a realization that the main complaints made by citizens about local government are related to planning matters.

Federal chiefs here

Several federal cabinet ministers will meet in Victoria on May 5 with the provincial cabinet in a working session to discuss economic development matters concerning B.C., Premier Bill Bennett said Friday.

Bennett and Senator Ray Perrault from B.C., in a joint statement, said the session will herald a new era in B.C.'s relations with the federal government.

At least 10 federal cabinet ministers have committed themselves to the one-day meeting, including Perrault, the Liberal government's leader in the Senate; Senator Bud Olsen, minister of economic development and Industry Minister Herb Gray.

Anglos vote yes on Quebec talks

MONTREAL (CP) — Forty-seven per cent of Canadians outside Quebec polled in a CBC study say they believe Canada should negotiate sovereignty-association with the Quebec government if it wins the May 20 referendum.

The poll, released Friday night, says 28 per cent of respondents outside Quebec believe the rest of Canada should refuse to negotiate. However, pollsters noted that people were not asked what should be negotiated, only whether there should be negotiations at all.

There was no opinion from the other 25 per cent of Canadians because seven per cent had no reply and 18 per cent, who say they have heard nothing about the referendum, weren't asked.

The poll says a majority of Quebecers and other Canadians questioned think the federal and provincial governments should consult the people by referendum before negotiating.

The results of the poll, conducted across Canada by the Centre de Recherches sur l'Opinion Publique (CROP), were broadcast Friday night on the CBC program Quarterly Report.

The new figures follow by a day a Gallup poll, prepared for the Council for Canadian Unity, that found 67 per cent of Canadians outside Quebec feel their premiers should refuse to negotiate sovereignty-assciation.

The CROP poll was conducted between March 26 and April 7 in Quebec and March 22 and April 4 in the other provinces. It covered 877 households in Quebec and 962 in the other provinces. The pollsters estimate that such a sample will give the correct results 19 times out of 20.

The study found major differences between the views of Quebecers and other Canadians polled. More than two-thirds of Quebecers, but only a third of their countrymen, said they are worried about the referendum.

Also, fifty-six per cent of Quebecers polled thought provincial powers should be increased. But while half of the Albertans and British Columbians in the poll agreed, other Canadians overall did not.

Hospital approved

The Seventh Day Adventist church has been granted approval in principle to construct a 100-bed intermediate-care hospital in the Sidney area.

The construction schedule calls for work to begin in April, 1981, with completion one year later.

Site of the hospital has not yet been determined.

The church owns Resthaven Island where it operated a hospital until two years ago.

It has made a deal to sell the 18-kilometre island to Abacus Cities for a proposed resort but it was not consummated.

A spokesman for the church said various sites are being considered, including part of Resthaven Island.

BMW 528i

BMW has long been acclaimed as builder of the best sports sedans in the world. But the advent of the 528i represents a major evolutionary step. Added to the 528i's precise handling, sure-footed suspension, and spirited performance are new engineering innovations to meet the requirements of the 80's. Trimmed to 2.8 litres, the engine actually delivers better acceleration than its acclaimed predecessor, the 530i.
A mini computer, called a Lambda Sensor, constantly analyses exhaust gases and automatically adjusts air fuel ratios for optimum combustion efficiency and economy.
If the BMW 528i is miserly with gas, it is generous with its joys. With its smooth, instant, exact response to the throttle, the 528i lives up to its ROAD & TRACK review: "If the 530i was already our favorite sports sedan, the 528i increases the middle size BMW's margin over the rest". City to lose realtor conventions?

By AL FORREST

The B.C. Real Estate Association will hold its convention in Victoria in June — but it may be the last time, Canadian Real Estate Association president Eric Charman warned Friday.

"We have not bid for a future convention here. To be fair, we couldn't because of the uncertainty of convention facilities."

Charman was commenting on the controversy over the proposed convention centre on the waterfront below Bastion Square.

He has written to Mayor Bill Tindall protesting the delay in reaching a decision.

Ald. Robin Blencoe has urged city council to find some site away from the waterfront.

In an interview, Charman outlined recent developments in real estate conventions involving Victoria.

—About 700 delegates will attend the B.C. convention here but they will have to make use of the Newcombe auditorium and the McPherson Theatre as well as the Crystal Ballroom in The Empress to look after the 700-plus delegates. It is the largest convention the city can comfortably handle.

—Victoria was the first choice of an international industrial real estate group for a 1981 convention but Charman had to direct them to Vancouver instead.

"There would be 800 delegates at least. We just don't have the facilities. We have made arragement for about one-third of them to make a side trip to Victoria."

—Victoria has made a bid for the Canadian Real Estate Association convention, which has never been held in a city smaller than Winnipeg. But without a new convention centre the invitation can not be accepted.

Charman said these are just a few examples of the business being lost in Victoria because of the delay in getting a convention building, first proposed in 1897.

APC may ease rules

Rules of the Victoria Advisory Planning Commission will probably be changed to allow members of the public a chance to speak when development proposals for government property come up.

Now only those owners or tenants with an interest in property within a one-block radius may speak at the monthly APC information meetings where developments and rezoning proposals are first unveiled.

A number of Victorians complained of being muzzled last week when the APC considered a rezoning proposal to allow the waterfront convention centre to go ahead. Because they didn't own land or a business nearby they could not speak.

"It wasn't a healthy situation and we will review it," said Mayor Bill Tindall at city council to a question from APC member Muriel Mixon of James Bay.

"In hindsight we should have (allowed them to speak)," he told Betty Gibbens of 933 Convent Place. "We are going to review it and make changes where necessary."

The provincial government has resisted the temptation to get involved in the aftermath of that tragic farce in Iran.

Sources say Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy was agitating for the government to send a message of condolence to the Americans for the failure of their hostage rescue mission. For a change, Grace didn't get her own way.

He appears to be permanently glued to the legislative hot seat, target of a barrage of bellyaching. The technique would be familiar to students of brainwashing.

The legislature has spent 44 hours on the premier's estimates so far and the opposition shows no sign of winding down their talkathon.

The debate has been tedious, feeble, irritating, shallow and witless. The overall effect is to numb the mind and glaze the eyeballs.

It has reached the point where the merest mention of a Dirty Trick or the mildest accusation of political arrogance is enough to cause severe depression, headaches and nausea among hardened reporters. Nosebleeds are common among unsuspecting tourists who drop in to catch half an hour of the action.

The NDP accuses Premier Bill of refusing to answer questions. The premier accuses the opposition of negativeism. Don Phillips yells himself red in the face on behalf of Social Credit. Graham Lea has a well-controlled spasm on behalf of the NDP.

Round and round, on and on. A clear case of malice in wonderland.

The honorable members, however, are missing an essential point — everybody else has lost interest.

No one is making Brownie points with the voters because the voters are no longer listening.

Hello in there, can you hear me? You can come out now. Everyone else has gone home.

Good news for all us little fellows here in the boonies.

The big boys from Ottawa are coming out to play. They'll hold our hands, check our bank accounts and tuck us into our teeny cots for another four years.

The ritual act of condescension takes place May 5 when 10 federal cabinet ministers visit Victoria for a day of discussions with their counterparts in the provincial cabinet.

Senator Ray Perrault, making the announcement at a press conference Friday, called it "part of a determined effort by the federal government to stay in touch with western Canada."

He didn't take kindly to the suggestion that we should consider the visit a cheap afterthought to the B.C. Liberal convention, which winds up the day before.

The premier, who joined the senator in making the announcement, deplored the suggestion that the whole thing is another Trudeau government exercise in public relations. Where was his much-publicized anger at federal neglect of the west?

Intergovernmental Relations Minister Garde Gardom, also present for the press conference, wouldn't say for sure whether the legislature would have to adjourn for the day to free the provincial ministers for their jolly meetings. He didn't rule it out.

Traditions, like fruit trees, can stand a little pruning now and then. Such is the case with that grand old tradition of the legislature, the introduction of guests in the public galleries.

Members spend between 10 and 20 minutes at the start of every sitting, making long-winded introductions of relatives, friends, constituents, girl guides, school groups and — very rarely — prominent visitors. Each introduction is dutifully applauded.

But things are getting worse. Members have taken to interrupting the debate to make introductions they forgot to make earlier.

Before this session ends — and it should be a record-breaker — the MLAs will have spent the equivalent of two full sitting weeks listening to each other make inane introductions and thumping their desks.

Time to cut that tradition back before it takes over completely and members find themselves interrupting introductions to squeeze in a little business.

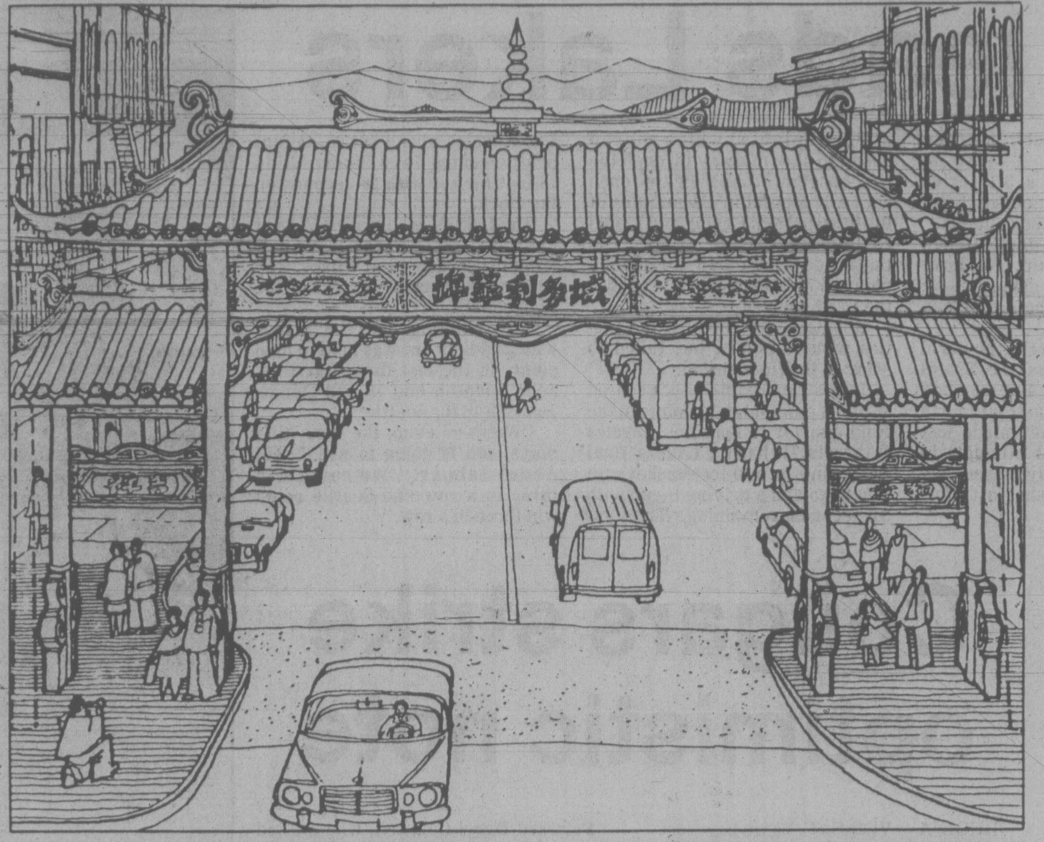
Social Notes from the Bureaucracy: The grey eminence is back. Superdeputy Lawrie Wallace, in his first couple of days on the job, has clearly demonstrated he hasn't lost the touch. One of his first moves was to swipe his old secretary away from Deputy Provincial Secretary Gerald Cross. The perks of power.



Artist's sketch shows how Chinatown arch may look when completed.

Chinatown fund drive enters second phase

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Victoria's Chinese community has raised more than $30,000 for its landmark gateway to Chinatown and is now appealing to corporations and individuals for a matching amount.

Companies which give $500 or more and individuals who donate $100 — all deductible from income tax — will have their names on a bronze plaque to be attached to the traditional Chinese-style archway, Dean Strongitharme said Friday.

The former city planner, who has remained chairman of the co-ordinating committee supervising the revitalization of Chinatown, is appealing to all sectors of the non-Chinese community for support.

There will also be a time capsule to be sealed into the base of the gate when construction starts.

Strongitharme says that tentative plans are for a scroll of names to be buried with the usual artifacts which go into such a time capsule.

Although details have yet to be worked out, Victorians may be able to sign the parchment scroll in return for a $2 donation to the gateway fund.

Already, about $10,000 has been raised in corporate donations.

The most recent were a $5,000 gift from AirWest Airlines and $500 from Buckerfield's, a company which as been located at the edge of Chinatown for many years.

All donations to the Chinatown Gateway Fund should be sent to city hall.

Strongitharme said in an interview that Mickey Lam, a city hall planning staffer, and others are working on the design details of the gateway.

It is to be symbolic of several things — a gateway to the Orient, a symbol of good relations between the Chinese and other Victorians and a commemoration of the rejuvenation of Chinatown.

The committee wants it to be as authentic as possible, including the carved dragons to be mounted above the street, but it also must meet a budget of about $100,000.

The original estimate last year was $96,000 with a proposal to ask the provincial heritage trust for half the amount to match what the community raises.

Under the $1 million clean-up of Fisgard Street between Government and Store, old brick buildings are being cleaned and painted, telephone and power lines are going underground and wider, decorative sidewalks are being built.

$2 million housing plan set

A housing co-op backed by labor organizations and credit unions is planning a $2 million housing project in the Hillside-Cedar Hill area of Victoria.

With an offer of $450,000 the Victoria Innovative Housing Society was the only bidder for a 2.2 acre piece of city-owned property at Ryan and Mt. Stephen streets in north Fernwood.

City council recently advertised the property and the Rainbow site in Victoria West for sale. Tenders were due Thursday.

Ald. Bill McElroy said the co-op project could be under construction this year and ready for occupancy by early 1981 if it gets the go-ahead.

The society's bid for the land will be considered by council's land use planning and zoning committee when it meets at city hall Tuesday morning.

A society spokesman said it has tentative approval from the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp. for the co-op, which will include a certain percentage of residents on low incomes.

Their monthly payments will be held to 25 per cent of their income while CMHC picks up the rest.

"They like the Mt. Stephen project," McElroy said Friday of the federal agency's reaction.

The project will consist of 30 units in fourplexes and triplexes. The present estimate of the cost is $55,000 to $60,000 per unit, including the land.

McElroy said the monthly rent on the units would vary from $125 to $500.

The usual rule of thumb for such subsidized co-ops — similar to Marigold which the alderman manages — is 25 per cent for low income families, 50 per cent for those on moderate incomes and the rest for upper income brackets.

Victoria has agreed to provide one lot as a buffer area and park between the co-op and a dozen single-family homes on property it recently sold on Ryan Street.

The Mt. Stephen project is the third undertaken in the Victoria area by the society, which has also organized and built co-ops in Vancouver.

It has just finished renovating the Beckley Farms co-op, a former commercial project in James Bay with 10 units which it took over and made into a co-op.

The society, backed by credit unions, the B.C. Federation of Labor and individual unions, including the International Woodworkers of America and the carpenters, also had part of the Glentana project in View Royal.

On the Rainbow site, the city received five bids ranging from $378,000 to $630,000. Prices vary so much because the bidders have differing proposals for the 1½ acres of land on the south Vic West waterfront between Russel and Robert streets.

A maximum of 21 housing units are allowed on the site under the R-J low density attached dwelling zoning.

Petition launched against link to mainland proposal

By AB KENT

Claudia Donato describes herself as an irate citizen who doesn't like the idea of a fixed link between Vancouver Island and the mainland.

So she's getting up her own petition seeking public support from committed islanders who like Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands the way they are.

She said arrangements for distributing the petition will be made within a day or so.

"We all enjoy the (Vancouver) island for what it is," she said Friday after seeing former cabinet minister Sam Bawlf's telephone survey which shows 72 per cent of respondents favor a bridge.

"What really got me going was the day they published the map showing all those lines crossing over the Gulf Islands."

Donato said she finds it curious the Islands Trust had neither discussed the proposal nor taken any action, even though the security of the islands seems threatened.

A spokesman for the trust said the idea of a link to the mainland will be discussed in mid-May.

Donato said everyone she had spoken to is very concerned.

"The Times poll got people thinking," she said, referring to a reader's ballot showing 71 per cent opposed to a bridge-tunnel link.

American-born, Donato said she had lived in Victoria 4½ years and is a landed immigrant.

She says she and her husband have done lot of travelling in North and South America and have found:

"There's no place like here, and the tourists come here because of the uniqueness of the islands."

In effect, she says, people who sign will be refusing permission for the government to use $500,000 to $1 million in tax revenue for an engineering feasibility study and an estimated $2.5 billion more for the project itself.

Try for high a real downer

Two William Head prison inmates will be returned to the medium security institition this weekend sadder but wiser after nearly dying from the effects of mushroom poisoning.

Program director Colin Sheppard said today the pair, both 24, collapsed in a dormitory Thursday night after eating some mushrooms that grow wild on the 82-acre prison grounds.

Sheppard said the mushrooms are a perennial problem.

"Every year it comes up," he said. "We usually get some guy trying for a new high."

One of the inmates was unconscious and the other convulsing when they were found by staff about 10 p.m.

They were rushed to Royal Jubilee Hospital and admitted to the intensive care unit.

Sheppard said prison staff had no idea at the time what the men's trouble was but doctors at the hospital diagnosed the condition as acute poisoning caused by consuming the highly toxic mushroom amanita pantherina, also known as "death angel."

The men were transferred to a regular ward Friday and were in good condition today.

One of the inmates was serving two years for two counts of robbery and had been in prison since last September.

The other, serving eight years for importing and possession of a narcotic, started his sentence in February.

Their names were not released. One of the inmates celebrated his 24th birthday on Friday.

Sheppard said said staff tries to get rid of the mushrooms by cutting or using chemicals.

"But there are more than 80 acres out there. You can't destroy them all."

He said, however, the eradication program has been stepped up since the incident. On Friday guards were carting them off in bucket-loads.

There have been no other reports of poisonings this year.

"I think after this case, everything should cool out," Sheppard said.

Trade centre plans to be aired Sunday

A public rally of Victorians opposed to the waterfront convention centre will be held at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at the Empress.

The ad hoc Committee for an Open Inner Harbor will air the issues surrounding the project.

Member Charles Ball of the James Bay Residents League said other organizers include Marjorie Pettigrew and former Conservative candidate Maggie Lynn.

They've invited community leaders and politicians to the rally.

Home show a big draw

About 8,000 Victorians went through the Home Expo 80 show at Esquimalt Arena on opening day Friday.

The show continues until 9 p.m. tonight and from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Handicapped people are invited to tour the exhibits from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. Sunday when the show is closed to the general public.

Directors of the Housing and Urban Development of Canada, sponsors of the show, will be available to assist handicapped people at that time.

Local HUDAC president Alan MacGillivray said the first-day crowd of 8,000 puts the target of 30,000 visitors within reach and the total could it 40,000.

Expo 80 organizer Kay Lines said the crowds were so large at times on Friday it was difficult for handicapped people to move around so it was decided to have a special opening for them Sunday morning.

There are several displays of wood-burning stoves and landscaping and furnishing exhibits.

Whelan canny on aid to farmers

By AL FORREST

It was the minister's first visit here since the election.

The farmers asked Whelan for an increase in the federal subsidy for transporting feed grains and for assistance in obtaining lower-cost irrigation water.

The minister agreed to consider both requests.

But a request for tariff help to counter excessive imports of potatoes was rejected.

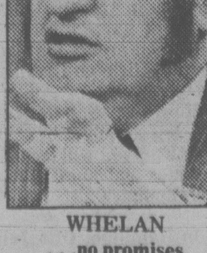
The meeting was sponsored by the Saanich Peninsula Farmers Institute.

Central Saanich greenhouse grower Jack Arnaud said some significant progress was made because the minister expressed concern about the cost of both feed grain and irrigation water supplies.

"We've got a good chance of getting some help here."

He said Central Saanich farmers have asked for the right to tap the main water line for irrigation purposes, rather than build a second line as required under present regulations in order to qualify for government funding.

Arnaud said the water would be less expensive if it came from the main pipeline and the supply would be more than adequate for everyone's needs.



WHELAN
. . .no promises

He said Whelan is concerned that feed grains cost $30 more a ton in Central Saanich than in the Fraser Valley because of transportation costs.

The waiting time at the ferry is a significant cost factor.

While there is a federal subsidy, the cost of transportation has increased faster than the rate of government help, putting a cost burden on local farmers.

Whelan said he would give the matter immediate study although he made no firm promise on action.

The minister also agreed to get further details on irrigation costs.

Whelan outlined farming conditions across Canada and said some sectors are in trouble, notably the pig farmers of Ontario.

He said there have been high profits in pigs in recent years but so many farmers went into the business that supplies now are far in excess of demand and prices have collapsed.

Kareem leads Lakers

By The Canadian Press

Philadelphia 76ers and Los Angeles Lakers moved one step closer to a confrontation for the National Basketball Assocation championship by defeating semifinal opponents Friday night.

The Sixers, getting 30 points from Julius Erving, pushed Boston to the brink of elimination by beating the Celtics 102-90 in an Eastern Conference final game in Philadelphia.

The Lakers, spearheaded by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's 33 points, turned back Seattle SuperSonics 104-100 in Seattle to take a 2-1 lead in their best-of-seven Western Conference final.

The teams are back in action Sunday.

Despite holding a 3-1 series lead, Philadelphia coach Billy Cunningham remained cautious.

"We've won three games, that's all," said Cunningham. "We have three pieces of the cake, but we have to get all four before we can eat it."

Erving scored 12 of his points in the third quarter as the Sixers built a 16-point lead. But they had to survive a near-disastrous fourth quarter in which they made just two of 23 field goal attempts in order to win. The only reason they did was that Boston shot just 6-for-22 in that period.

Philadelphia, which moved ahead to stay midway through the first quarter, broke the game open with a 17-5 burst in 4½ minutes of the third period. Erving and Lionel Hollins scored five points apiece in the surge that carried Philadelphia to a 76-61 lead with 5:14 to go in the third quarter.

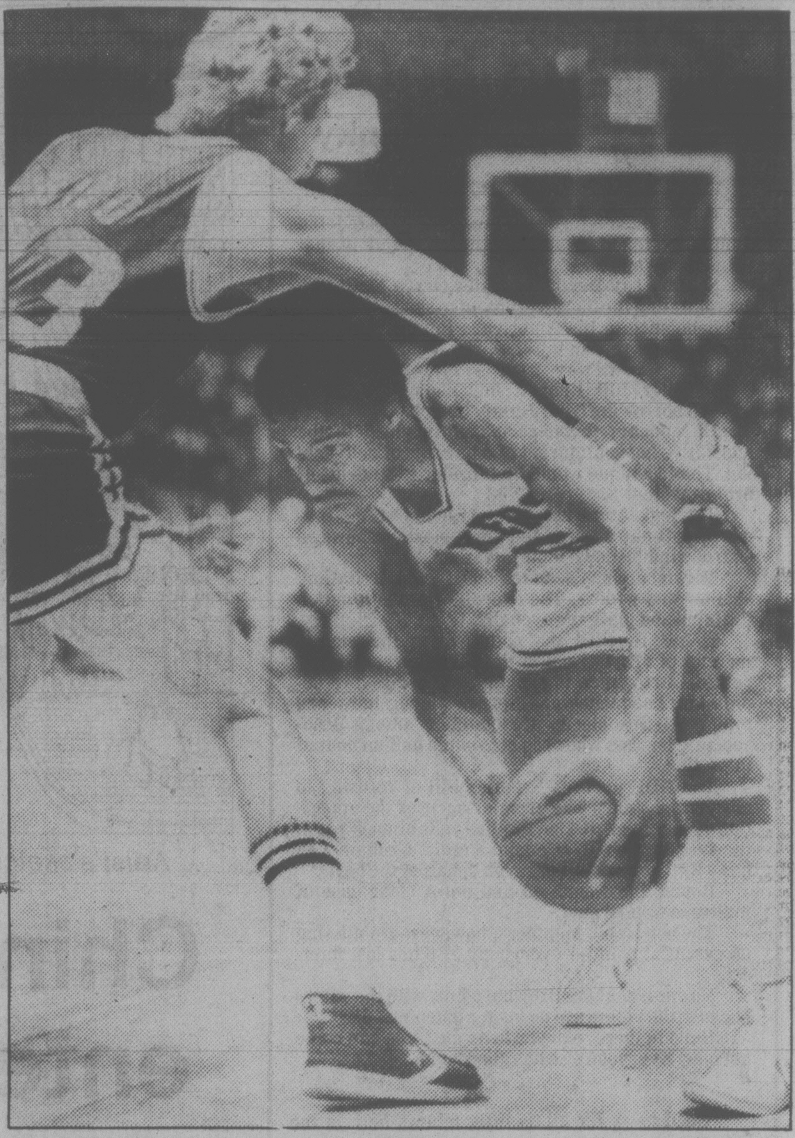
Rookie Larry Bird led the Celtics with 19 points, but failed to score in the final period.

In Seattle, Abdul-Jabbar scored 13 of his game-high 33 points in the final quarter to lead Los Angeles to the win. He had the Lakers' final four points on a 10-foot basket with 1:10 to go and a driving layup with 34 seconds remaining. That put Los Angeles ahead 104-98, before Seattle centre Jwck Sikma hit an 18-foot basket with 26 seconds on the clock.

The Lakers, who trailed 52-48 at halftime, got a strong second half from forward Jamaal Wilkes, who finished with 21 points, 16 in the second half.

Gus Williams led the Sonics with 23 points but was held to nine points in the last three quarters. John Johnson had 19 and Dennis Johnson 18 for Seattle.

"We're so even, the team that plays well is going to win," said Abdul-Jabbar. "We could win three in a row and Seattle could win three in a row."



THE LOW ROAD appears best for Philadelphia's Julius Erving, who ducks under arm of Boston Celtic star Larry Bird on way to score basket during National Basketball Association game Friday. Erving scored 30 point to lead 76ers to 102-90 triumph and 3-1 advantage in best-of-seven semi-final.

A big piece of the Rock will be missing for Irish

It's true. The defending Mann Cup-champion Victoria Shamrocks may be in a spot of bother this season. At least it won't be a cake walk in the Western Lacrosse Association as it was at times last year and in the cup final, when they disposed of Peterborough Red Oaks four straight. The Rocks were at their peak when they finished that one.

But this is another year. And it may be different.

Take away Ivan Thompson, Ranjit Dillon, Bob Cool, Dennis Somner, Norm Baker, Steve Buckley, Scott Marshall and maybe Dan Green from the championship lineup and what have you got?

"We're weak on the left side," admits new coach Joe McCrea. "You just don't lose players like those and not feel it," he added. He neglected to mention that the name Joe McCrea is another deleted from the club roster.

"Otherwise, we should be okay," he added hopefully.

Thompson is retiring (again) after a tremendous Mann Cup final when he was named winner of the Mike Kelly award as the outstanding player. But that was to be expected because Ivan for the past few years has been threatening to quit and make it stick. Dillon, a 13-year veteran of the club, also deserves his retirement. Cool's quitting the team came as a shock as he too was one of the better players in the championship round last year after coming from Nanaimo. Somner is another veteran who has had enough after a long tenure and, in return, is taking over some of the coaching duties of the junior Legion squad.

Baker has not been out to practice, neither has Buckley. Marshall obviously didn't want to continue in a backup role to all-star goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer while Green has some personal and work problems to work out before he definitely makes up his mind.

So that's quite a chunk out of the champions, especially for a new coach to work with. But McCrea feels the younger players coming up will be more than adequate. "If not right now, in time," he said. "We looked crummy the first half of the game against the juniors Tuesday," he added. "We were rusty around the edges, but I kind of expected it. We only had one scrimmage before the game as many of our players were involved with field lacrosse. Then, in the third period, I thought we played well."

McCrea said he was impressed with goalie Mike Duch, the former Legion star, who will be backup to Smeltzer. "I thought he played well and I'm sure he will help us."

Expected to perform their normal functions are such veteran holdovers as Gerry Cadwallader, Chris Hall, Larry Bell, Dave Lowden, Dave Thomson, Art Webster, Rick Baker, Jim Lynch and Kevin Alexander plus two senior B players who helped the Shamrocks many times in 1979, Bill Marechek and Andy Reid.

Helping to fill the gap for the retired and the tired will be junior graduates Jim Boyd, Paul Michaels, newcomer Bob Wolfe from Huntsville, Ont., plus two players who were with Nanaimo last year, Tej Labh and Jack Kastelein. In addition, Jeevan Dillon has returned to the club and McCrea is pleased with his play.

Boyd will be recalled as having been a spark for the Rocks in the Cup final last fall. Michaels, who also has played with the Irish before, has impressed McCrea with his speed. "I think he can be a dandy," McCrea said.

Wolfe comes recommended by Ivan Thompson's brother, Brian, who played with the Irish a few seasons ago. "He is a junior B graduate," said McCrea, "shows promise, but has a lot of learning to do."

Then, of course, the Irish still hope to make a deal with Nanaimo for the Timbermen's top draft choice, Tarey Pollock, who also saw action with, and played well for, the Shamrocks last year.

"That would take care of some of my problems," said McCrea.

Yes it would. And also some of Nanaimo's financial problems as well.

Cougars strike optimistic note

REGINA — Victoria Cougars have lost a defenceman but the Western Division champions, trailing 2-1 in their best-of-seven showdown with Regina Pats for the Western Hockey League championship, still are confident of coming back.

With the next three games scheduled here, Cougars must win at least two to force a seventh and deciding game in Victoria on May 1.

The series' fourth game is scheduled tonight, the fifth Sunday and the sixth, if necessary, on Tuesday. With extra seating added, Pats' manager Bob Strumm says a crowd in excess of 6,000 — a record for Regina — "is very likely."

Victoria coach Jack Shupe was more interested in survival, and he feels "there is no reason why we shouldn't be playing Tuesday. We play well in Regina and home-ice does not always turn out to be an advantage. Sometimes the pressure goes on the home team."

Cougars will wind up the season without the services of 17-year-old Bob McGill. The big rearguard from Leduc, Alta., suffered a fractured bone in his right hand as the result of a fight with Barry Zeigler in Victoria Thursday.

His spot in the lineup will be filled by Jerry Heikkila, called up from Sherwood Park of the Alberta Junior League last month.

Forward Daryl Coldwell, who missed the last two games after stretching wrist ligaments, is expected to return to action tonight.

Meanwhile, in continuing developments off the ice, it looks like Winnipeg will be back in the league after three seasons on the bench.

A five-man group has been offered a franchise and has until June 1 to put up money for acceptance. A Winnipeg entry would restore the East Division to a balanced eight teams.

The Great Falls franchise, which was suspended in mid-season, has moved to Spokane and will become the fifth team in the Western Division along with Victoria, Portland Winter Hawks, Seattle Breakers and New Westminster Bruins.

The Winnipeg group includes lawyers Fran Huck, a former junior standout with Regina, and Jerrold Gunn and businessmen Harry Buekert, Marsden Fenwick and Albert DeFehr. Huck, who also played for the Canadian national team, is expected to be the coach.

The Winnipeg group intends to introduce a concept new to major junior hockey. They intend to recruit top-calibre players by offering a sort of a scholarship that will encourage juniors to work at or attend university.

Strike threatens hockey telecast

Times News Services

MONTREAL — Sunday's telecast of the final Stanley Cup quarter-final hockey game is threatened by a weekend walkout of CBC television production assistants.

About 900 unionized production employees began a "suspension of service" Friday at Radio-Canada, the French-language service of the CBC, after contract talks failed to produce any agreement on a lengthy salary dispute.

Union president Roger Cuerrier said the production assistants would be off the job until Monday.

The strike disrupted regular French-language programming at Radio-Canada Friday, and would affect both English and French broadcasts of the hockey game, the seventh and deciding contest in the series between Montreal Canadiens and Minnesota North Stars.

The production workers are responsible for non-technical co-ordination of the hockey game broadcast, cueing announcers and commentators and signalling referees to delay play for commercials.

An earlier 24-hour walkout by the production employees during the second game of the play-off series cancelled between-period commentary and interfered with the broadcast of commercials.

Cuerrier said contract talks Friday morning "went nowhere," and said no further negotiating sessions are scheduled.

If the Canadiens manage to get past the North Stars and go on to win their 22nd Stanley Cup, they should give physiotherapist Yvon Belanger a medal.

While those healthy enough on the team's roster have been trying to trim the North Stars, Belanger has fought an uphill battle to keep the injury list from reaching double figures.

Just when Belanger's medicinal magic had enabled the return of centre Pierre Mondou and defenceman Serge Savard, another centre and defenceman — Pierre Larouche and Brian Engblom — were injured during Minnesota's 5-2 victory Thursday night.

They now join Guy Lapointe and Doug Risebrough in the doubtful starter category for game seven, while all-star right winger Guy Lafleur hopes to rejoin the team sometime in the semi-finals — if Montreal gets that far.

The injuries have left coach Claude Ruel in a quandary as he attempts to choose his lineup for the Sunday's game.

"I have to dress the guys who are ready and capable to play," Ruel said.

Assessing his team's chances against Minnesota, who have taken two of the three games here, Ruel said: "If we cannot win one game in our building, we do not deserve to be in the semi-finals. There is just one game left — it is a whole new series."

Werbeniuk wins

SHEFFIELD, England (Reuter) — Bill Werbeniuk of Winnipeg rallied in the last two frames to beat Willie Thorne of Britain 10-9 in a first-round match at the world professional snooker championship Friday.

Rosie's New York victory invalidated

Times News Services

Rosie Ruiz's place in the New York City Marathon, the race that qualified her for the Boston Marathon, has been taken away.

Can her victory in Boston be far behind?

"Based on our investigation, we are now invalidating her finish at the New York City Marathon," said Nina Kuscsik, a former top female finisher at the Boston Marathon and now a member of the New York race committee. "We could ask for the medal back."

Officials of the New York Marathon, embarrassed because their race last October was Ruiz's stepping stone to Boston, offered evidence for invalidating her time.

"It's sad but true," said Fred Lebow, president of the New York Roadrunners Club. "Rosie did not finish."

The evidence disclosed Friday indicated Ruiz, 26, never finished the New York race. When videotapes of the finish line photo was frozen at Ruiz's purported time of 2:56:29, no runner was seen crossing. The tape then showed several runners, including Cindy Wuss of New York, whose time was listed as one second slower than Ruiz's.

China won't attend the Summer Olympics in Moscow, United Nations Ambassador Lai Ya-li said. "As long as the Soviet Union is in Afghanistan, we will not participate," he told a conference for teachers at Fairleigh Dickinson University.

However, San Marino, the tiny republic in southern Europe, will send 14 athletes and 12 officials to the Olympics.

In Hamilton, Otto Jelinek, Progressive Conservative member for Halton, said the Canadian government should prevent the Soviet Union from participating in the Canada Cup hockey tournament planned for September. Jelinek says he will ask the government to cancel Russian participation, calling it a conflict of interest and "outrageous" that Canada should boycott the Olympics and yet invite the Russians to Canada for a hockey tournament.

The Canadian men's basketball team, which qualified for the Olympic Games earlier this week at the Americas qualifying tournament in Puerto Rico, will be trying to arrange some games this spring despite the boycott.

Coach Jack Donohue of Ottawa said he is working on a plan to take his team overseas. However, any trip must be completed by June 19 because of International Basketball Federation rules which prohibit national teams from playing between June 19 and Sept. 1, unless they are going to the Olympics.

Any team breaking that rule is subject to a $10,000 fine and a one-year suspension in international play.

"It would be a reward to the players for what they've put into our program," Donohue said, adding his team "the best that I've ever coached." It won five of six games.

More than 15,000 fans turned out at the Winnipeg Arena to watch an exhibition hockey game Friday and help raise more than $70,000 for Bill Heindl, a crippled former professional player.

The money will go into a trust fund for Heindl, now a paraplegic, confined to a wheelchair after a suicide attempt six months ago.

Big scores likely in tenpin rolloffs

It might take whopping scores to grab titles, trophies and cash when tenpinners compete at Mayfair Lanes at 1 p.m. (Pacific Daylight Time) Sunday in the 17th annual Victoria Times Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Several of the qualifiers cracked the wood for big tallies as they earned places in the rolloffs by winning weekly awards during the annual, 26-week Times Bowler-of-the-Week competition that is open to all bowlers competing in league play on southern Vancouver Island lanes.

Eight of the qualifiers in the men's section topped the 675 mark in their three-game series and five of the women rattled the pins for totals above 620.

Biggest gunners among the men were Alex Holowachuk, who posted a 694 triple in the contest's opening week, and Phil Schulz, who racked up a 690 in the final week. Others above 675 were Fred Rentz (689), Ken Grexton (687), Bernie Nichols (686), Bob Holness (683), Larry Jacobs (676) and Al Hill (676).

Darlene Williams, hitting for 638 in the ninth week, was the leader among the ladies. Also topping 620 were Liz Taylor (624), Linda Parker (623), Vera Gibbons (621) and Jessie Loo (621).

Rolloffs will be contested in three-game, scratch series. In the event of a tie for first place, the bowler rolling the highest single game will be awarded the title.

Each rolloff winner will receive a Times Trophy and any rolloff champion who is a daily subscriber to the Victoria Times will receive a bonus award of $150.

Marshmallows and Twins get under Martin's skin

By The Canadian Press

Billy Martin's Oakland Athletics celebrated his return to Minnesota on Friday by playing like marshmallows.

Martin didn't like much of anything that happened, starting with the first inning when the Twins scored four times on three walks, Glenn Adams's grounder, Butch Wynegar's two-run double and Mike Cubbage's single and went on to bury the A's 10-3.

To make matters worse for Martin on his first trip to Minnesota since his infamous fight with a marshmallow salesman in a Bloomington hotel last October that cost him his job as manager of New York Yankees, a spectator near the dugout twice peppered him with, you guessed it, marshmallows.

Martin exchanged words with the fan after the first incident as he returned from a trip to the mound in the opening inning, but then went into the dugout. When a repetition occurred in the ninth, the fiery manager put one foot on the railing between the field and the stands before the umpires and members of the A's restrained him.

"He did it once and then went and hid like a baby," said Martin. "But my coach caught him the second time and the police got him.

"I hope they fine him. The Minnesota fans are good fans. This was just one guy acting like a jerk. There's no room for that in baseball. I'm not going to tolerate it."

The Twins pounded Oakland's Matt Keough and three relievers for 11 hits, including seven in a row in the fifth inning when Jose Morales hit a two-run homer off Mark Souza and Rick Sofield slammed a three-run homer off Rick Lysander.

In other American League action, Toronto Blue Jays downed Milwaukee Brewers 5-3, Kansas City Royals drubbed Baltimore Orioles 7-0, Chicago White Sox blanked New York Yankees 6-0, Detroit Tigers battered Boston Red Sox 11-3, California Angels nipped Seattle Mariners 4-3 and Texas Rangers beat Cleveland Indians 4-1.

In the National League, Houston Astros' pitcher J.R. Richard admitted he tired in the ninth inning in a 7-4 victory over New York but he was sharp much longer than the Mets.

Richard, off to one of his best starts ever, allowed the Mets only three hits and left after walking two batters in the ninth inning on the way to his third straight victory of the season.

"I got pooped out, man," said Richard.

Elsewhere in the NL, Atlanta Braves edged Montreal Expos 8-7, Chicago Cubs defeated Pittsburgh Pirates 5-3, St. Louis Cardinals downed Philadelphia Phillies 3-1, San Francisco Giants trimmed Cincinnati Reds 4-3 and Los Angeles Dodgers defeated San Diego Padres 6-3.

Victorians chalk up first-round victories

Most impressive were Sher Horne and Mike Montgomery. They advanced to the second round with overpowering displays in the boys' under-19 division. Horne clipped Neil Goldsmith of Toronto 9-0, 9-4, 9-0 while Montgomery beat Bob Coleman of Toronto 9-1, 9-3, 9-3.

Andrie Levey, competing in the girls' under-19 division, and Bob Ballinger both drew first-round byes.

Other Victoria players winning opening matches were John Crisp and Paul Sutton, in the under-16 category; John Dickie and Tim Ferris, in the under-14 bracket, and Cathy Covernton, in the under-19 division.

Quamichan clips Claremont

It was a romp for Lansdowne but a bit tougher for Quamichan as the two squads advanced to today's showdown game for the Vancouver Island junior high school rugby championship.

Lansdowne, the Greater Victoria champions, overpowered Courtenay 32-0 while Quamichan nipped Claremont 14-9 in Friday's semi-finals at Centennial Stadium.

John Chadwick, Richard Lamont and Gary Ellison counted tries for Quamichan. Chadwick also booted a conversion.

In fact, Palmer called it, among other things, "The worst round I've played in a long time . . . awful."

Palmer did snake home a 35-foot putt on the final hole for an eagle three to get the Palmer-Dow Finsterwald team to within six shots of the leaders, Tommy Bolt and Art Wall and Sam Snead and Don January.

Bolt-Wall and Snead-January each shot record 10-under-par 60s over the par-70 Onion Creek course in the opening round of the 54-hole tournament. The previous record of 61 had been established by defending champions Julius Boros and Roberto de Vicenzo in 1978.

Bolt made six birdies and Snead had seven to lead their red-hot teams.

Snead holed what he called "a field goal," a 50-foot putt on the 440-yard par-four 14th for his longest birdie putt of the day.

His did.

Watson holed putts totalling about 184 feet in length, including three in the 35- to 45-foot range, in a second-round, four-under-par 68 that left him tied for the lead with Hubert Green in the $250,000 Greater New Orleans Open.

Green, the defending champion, also shot a 68 Friday, but his was a solid, no-bogey effort in which he missed only one green.

The totals added up the same — 134 — 10 shots under par.

Jim Nelford of Burnaby, the only Canadian in the tournament, had a 73 on Thursday but carded a 78 on Friday, giving him a 151 total — seven strokes more than the maximum 144 required to qualify for the final 36 holes.

Six golfers, only one of whom has ever won an tour event, were tied for the lead after opening-round 69s at a $100,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at Birmingham, Ala.

Pat Meyers, the only previous tour winner, missed a putt on the 18th green that would have given her a 68 and sole ownership of the lead. Meyers tied with Beth Solomon, Kathy Linney, Elaine Hand, Therese Hession and Peggy Conley.

Five others were tied at 70, with another 10 at 71.

REDUCE STOCK NOW!

The order is out!!! Jerry Rosen, A & B Sound's Comptroller, is generally a nice, normal guy — except at YEAR END. At Year End, he growls and prowls the hall, grumbling about high inventory levels, too many demos and how much there is to count. With all the models we carry and the stacks of back-up inventories, Jerry has a lot to count and he's not happy. That's why we're holding our gigantic Pre-inventory Sale with prices so low that we're practically giving the stuff away! I mean, we want the stock reduced drastically!! So head to A & B Sound today and check out the bargains. You'll love Jerry's prices.

Merchants' route differs

The traffic usually moves from junior to senior, but Victoria Merchants have reversed the flow for their first campaign in the Pacific Coast Junior Baseball League.

Victoria's newest team, for players under 21, was to make its debut with a three-game series in Richmond today and Sunday. Coached by Randy Price and Jeff Owens, Merchants will make their home debut at Lambrick Park against North Shore next Saturday.

Six of the 16 players on the roster are players who campaigned in the Victoria Senior Amateur League last season. They are pitchers Larry Wedgewood, Dean Potter and Doug Bull, third baseman Don Towner, catcher Gary White and outfielder Marty Brouard.

Rounding out the roster are Mike Bull, Ron Burton, Ed Geric, Craig Gillespie, Bob Godfrey, Adrian Holland, Ontario transplant Paul Hrach, Danny Rogers and Dale Schmidt.

Merchants, who have working arrangements with both the Senior League and the Senior Babe Ruth League, may recruit other players on a game-to-game basis.

After concluding pre-season workouts, Price feels the team's strong points may be defence and pitching.

BRIAN DEGIROLAMO

Bochte top player

NEW YORK (AP) — Bruce Bochte of Seattle Mariners, who hit .423 last week, has been named basball's American League Player-of-the-Week.

Island Open action at interesting stage

They're getting into the "very-y-y interesting" stage in the Vancouver Island Open match-play golf championship.

Sixteen are still in contention for the CFAX Trophy. The list will be sliced to eight after Sunday's round at Uplands, and at least six of the eight second-round matches pose interesting possibilities.

Firstly, defending champion and medallist Dave Mick of Royal Colwood goes against Brian DeGirolamo, a young threat from Gorge Vale who has been playing very well in recent weeks. Brian, just out of junior ranks, is the son of several-time City Women's champion Dorothy DeGirolamo and, in the eyes of pro Earl Davies, "has the classic, smooth swing . . . as good as anybody's."

Dave Donaldson, a consistent threat from the Gorge, squares off with Oak Bay assistant Doug Mahovlic; Jeff Jones, the runnerup medallist, tackles tour pro Bob Beauchemin; Oak Bay's Paul Harris and Stu Holroyd of the Gorge are a pair of young threats capable of going all the way, and Colwood pro Bob Hogarth could have his hands full with Randy Gallop, one of the flock of good youngsters out of Nanaimo.

Perhaps the greatest interest lies in the matchup between Cowichan pro Bill Wakeham, a four-time Island Open winner, and talented Sandy Harper, the former B.C. junior champ from Nanaimo.

Play gets under way with the handicap division matches at 9 a.m. and the championship contenders move off at 9:30.

Sunday's draw and starting times:

HANDICAP DIVISION

9 a.m. — Wayne Douglas (RC) vs Ron Howard Jr. (RC); Ian Fraser (RC) vs Al Robertson (GV).

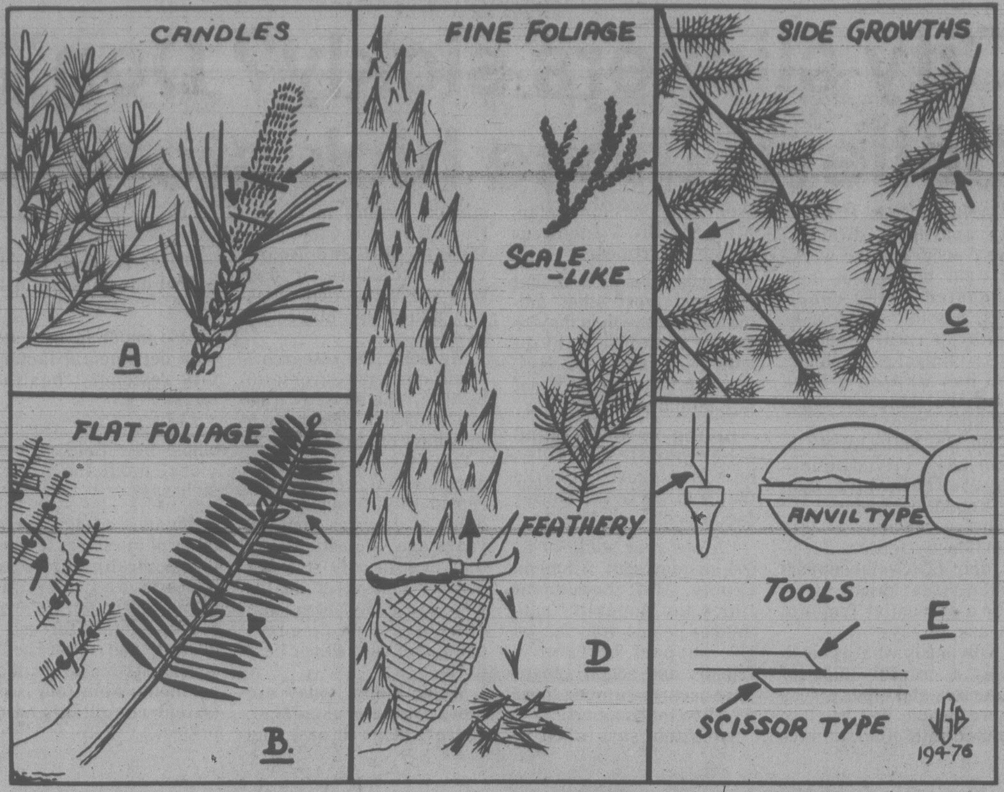
Lowdown on shaping conifers



The shaping of conifer trees is done in local gardens the last week of April and last week of August.

All conifers should be shaped from the first year of planting to keep them bushy and under control. Conifer (cone bearing) trees were described in the daily column for April 17, 1980.

Although this is a form of pruning, we avoid the use of the term "pruning" because gardeners interpret it as lopping off branches, and beheading central growths, as is done on fruit trees. Such drastic treatment on a conifer would completely ruin its character.

Each conifer has its botanical name, but gardeners generally refer to small trees as "little green bushes" and larger trees as "firs" or "cedars". No true cedars are native here.

Each type of conifer is trimmed according to its kind of foliage, which is probably the safest guide for the amateur, although it does not cover all the kinds grown here.

A good reference book covering all evergreens is a volume in the Time-Life Encyclopedia of Gardening titled Evergreens, which is available from local book stores and most libraries.

Pines and Firs put out brownish to orange-colored shoots from the tip of each growth in April, as shown in the illustration (A). The length varies with the species from two inches to 12 inches. To control size and produce thicker, more compact foliage, these candles are shortened by one-half to two-thirds of their length when full grown. This year my Pine is about two to three weeks behind in growth.

The work is best done with the fingers to avoid damage to adjacent needles, but it is a messy job and the thick gum on the hands can be removed only with turpentine. Don't try wiping with a dry cloth. Hand secateurs must be used with care and the blades cleaned every few cuts by dipping in a can of turpentine and wiping. If cuts are not clean the new growths will suffer.

Some trees with needles coming from the side of the stems giving a flattish appearance to the growths (B), have dormant growth buds at intervals. Branches extending beyond the general contour are cut off above a pair of buds well back under overlapping growth so that the cuts are not evident.

Trees with drooping limbs which put out small side branches with needles attached have long growths. Cut back to a branchlet underneath overlapping growths, taking care not to damage the branchlet behind the cut as shown at (C).

Conifers with fine foliage instead of needles and upright growth include those cute little pyramidal plants offered at low prices and bought by the thousands. Although advertised as "dwarf evergreens" they are produced from the juvenile foliage of forest trees and have an ultimate height of around 40 feet and a spread of 10 to 15 feet, making a foot of growth a year.

Planted in the right place these make beautiful specimens when shaped twice a year from time of planting but cannot be properly trained if allowed to go their own way for four or five years.

Shaping is done only with a razor-sharp curved pruning knife shown in (D). Starting at the base on the knees, the knife is run over the surface with long upward sweeps of the arm to remove about one-half inch of tip growth. Continue in a standing position, then on a stepladder until the top of the tree is reached.

Beheading a conifer is not the solution to the problem of height, as it will continue to extend upwards and look entirely out of character. Conifer heights range from 24 inches to 50 and 100 feet; if you want a 10- or 15-foot tree do not buy a 50-foot.

Junipers come in spreading and upright forms. The prostrate forms can spread 15 to 18 feet, making excellent ground covers. Reduction in spread is obtained by cutting back the lower branches at a point well behind that which overlaps.

Upright Junipers need only the removal of dead pieces which have been winter killed; the bush and globular forms may require a little judicious shaping, but never shearing.

Yew responds well to regular trimming with hedge shears, as does Thuya pyramidalis which quickly makes a tall hedge or screen in our climate and is not winter killed. Chamaecyparis cyano-viridis is an excellent conifer for Japanese effects. The foliage forms natural clumps at the end of the branches and can be trimmed into platter-shaped clusters as seen in local parks.

If you use anvil-type cutters be sure the blade is not worn or the anvil damaged (E). If the cutting edge or the anvil cannot be trued it will be impossible to make a clean cut and will cause browning and die-back.

On scissor-type cutters only the bevelled edges are sharpened, never the flat inside surfaces that overlap as the cut is made. Remember, the plants you are working on are worth more than the cost of a new pair of pruners.

Work for the week

Plant new herbaceous perennials — they will bloom later in year. Remember to label each one so it gets the care it needs.

Syringe with water newly planted trees and shrubs if days are sunny and perhaps windy which removes moisture from leaves.

Sow few beet seeds, only if soil is warm. Same with white turnip; neither like cool soil and roots will be tough if slow growing. Leaves of both these vegetables good when lightly cooked and served in moderation with other vegetables.

Plant few potatoes if sprouted and partially rooted, finding a sunny warm spot for quick growth and quick returns of new potatoes.

If no other salad greens ready for picking, sow mustard and cress indoors or porch for cutting within 10 days or so. Watch growth, and begin scissoring off clumps for sandwiches. Then resow.

Legal 'insanity' altered

OTTAWA (CP) — A little-noticed judgment of the Supreme Court of Canada last December has considerably broadened the grounds for an accused person to plead insanity as a defence in criminal cases.

The judgment by Mr. Justice Brian Dickson clears up some uncertainty among trial judges and provincial appeal courts as to what constitutes a disease of the mind which gives an accused grounds for an insanity defence.

Mr. Justice Dickson said that a judge can decide that an accused can suffer from a disease of the mind even though the medical evidence is that he or she does not.

He noted that disease of the mind is a legal, not a medical concept and that it can mean "different things to different psychiatrists."

"One might say that in a legal sense disease of the mind embraces any illness, disorder or abnormal condition which impairs the human mind and its functioning, excluding states caused by alcohol or drugs, as well as transitory mental states such as hysteria or concussion," he said.

Upon deciding that an illness falls within the legal concept of disease of the mind, a judge must leave it up to a jury to decide whether the accused had disease of the mind at the time the criminal act was committed, said Judge Dickson.

Mr. Justice Dickson also said that the Canadian test of whether an accused is insane while committing a crime differs from the British test.

The British test says a person "must know" the nature and quality of the act or omission, while the Criminal Code of Canada says an accused must "appreciate" the nature and quality of his act.

He said this drafting of the Canadian code was "a deliberate change in language from the common law rule in order to broaden the legal and medical considerations bearing upon the mental state of the accused and to make it clear that cognition was not to be, the sole criterion.

Mr. Justice Dickson said to know the nature of the crime "may mean merely to be aware of the physical act, while to appreciate it may involve understanding of the consequences of that act."

The Canadian code requires a level of understanding of the act which is more than mere knowledge that it is taking place, he said.

Lots of interesting things to tell you about this week . . . so we'll start right in with Roy Imports who have just received some stunning new one-of-a-kind Eva Fisher things . . . There's a sheer, pure wool shirtdress . . . in either cream or pale yellow . . . trimmed with satin piping and completely lined . . . Understated elegance, if ever we saw it! . . . And for the first time, suits from Eva Fisher . . . A beautiful cream wool suit with narrow shawl collar and front slitted skirt . . . A Tomato Red wool crepe with mandarin neck, the new pleated shoulder and peplum on the leather-belted jacket . . . And a simply gorgeously-fitting suit in navy wool so fine it's almost weightless! . . . Sleeves are bracelet length to show off the pretty blouse you'll certainly want to wear with it . . . and there's a deep front pleat in the skirt for easy walking . . . A pretty 2-piece Eva Fisher dress in navy and white polyester could also be worn as a suit because both jacket and skirt are lined . . . We also saw a new Deja jacket dress in blue and white striped seersucker . . . sleeveless V-neck dress and polka dotted scarf and hankie in the jacket pocket . . . This also in grey and white stripes . . . A Brodkin ultrasuede blazer in versatile camel color would be a great asset to anyone's wardrobe . . . This one's very pretty with gathered shoulder yoke . . . Good news: from now on both Roy stores are open on Mondays! . . . Roy Imports, 435 Simcoe St., 384-4932 and 9807 Third St., Sidney, 656-3522.

Delightful new shop for the young fry . . .

Wondering why you haven't been able to penetrate into Wilson's children's dept. lately? . . . Well, some quite exciting things have been happening there! . . . The Junior Shop has had not merely a face lift, but has been completely torn apart and put together again with a brand new look . . . Thick Wedgwood carpeting . . . white walls trimmed with blue . . . A big "animal cage" where all the stuffed animals will disport themselves . . . and "tunnel boxes" for the youngsters to play in while Mother does her browsing and selecting! . . . There's not another children's shop like it on Vancouver Island! . . . Sizes start with full layettes and clothes for the newborn . . . right up to size 12s for girls and boys . . . Moreover, same sizes in everything are to be found grouped together in attractive wall units . . . And of course the fish (or rather their descendants) which have fascinated generations of children are back . . . but in a brand new setting! . . . And just wait till you see the adorable clothes and other child needs! . . . Nothing finer anywhere! . . . For instance, we saw velour sleepers by Pierre Cardin . . . Knitwear from Spain and Portugal . . . Exquisite Feltman dresses with hand embroidery or smocking and French lace . . . French cotton knit underwear by Orly for infants and up . . . Emily Jane Harris tweed coats from England . . . Gloverall duffles and Tyrol jackets which wear like iron . . . and much, much more! . . . Open now at . . . W. & J. Wilson Limited, 1221 Government St., 383-7177.

Original primitive art from New Guinea . . .

Now we come to something for which our powers of description fail us! . . . Alcheringa have just received a shipment of genuine primitive native crafts from Papua New Guinea . . . Masks, baskets, spears and all manner of other things made by villagers in remote parts of Papua New Guinea, whose culture has been sheltered from outside influences and whose artifacts still reflect the folklore of their makers, accurately symbolizing a living part of the cultural background from which they originate . . . The piece de resistance . . . the absolute "ultimate" in this very interesting collection is the "Orator's Stool" from Korogo Village on the Sepik River . . . It represents an ancestral figure which empowers people to speak at assemblies . . . Whoever of the men wishes to speak stands beside it and rustles leaves of grass which rests on the back of the seat, to draw attention to himself . . . This is a very choice collector's item and a real investment . . . as are all the other artifacts, large and small . . . (If you were at Home Expo 80 this weekend, you undoubtedly saw some of them in the Alcheringa exhibit) . . . Beauty is definitely in the eye of the beholder . . . so if you're a connoisseur of this type of thing, you're bound to rave over these primitive artifacts . . . As for us, they scare us half to death! . . . Very fine and very exclusive! . . . Alcheringa, 616 Trounce Alley, 383-8224.

Some really neat wall clocks! . . .

"How would you like to tell people about our clocks?" Standard's Derek Denny asked us this week . . . "Clocks?" we echoed, thinking perhaps our hearing was playing tricks . . . But sure enough, clocks it was . . . a collection of wall clocks in the lamp department . . . something new for Standard Furniture, and well calculated to stop you in your tracks for a closer look! . . . These clocks are particularly nice for a kitchen or family room . . . As you're probably aware, many of the clocks one sees in kitchens tend to be on the gross side . . . and if not that, certainly pretty blah! . . . Standard's clocks are definitely neither . . . They're all electric . . . battery operated or quartz . . . so there's no ugly wire hanging down . . . Some are very contemporary, notably a lovely hand-rubbed white pine clock with a pendulum . . . or a round clock made of the same wood . . . They have a nice clean look . . . just the thing for people looking for something different for their own kitchen or family room . . . or as a neat gift for an upcoming wedding! . . . Other clocks in the collection have a definitely old-fashioned look with their oak frames . . . Roman numerals and octagonal shapes . . . many with pendulums . . . One beauty even has a nice chime! Some have flowers or scenes in the middle of the dial . . . and there's one that reminds us for all the world of the clocks in the little country stations in Quebec when we were a child . . . Nostalgic as all getout! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

The cream of the crop . . .

It simply isn't true that man can't improve on nature! . . . Take the matter of suede for instance . . . that made by man has qualities far superior . . . and practical . . . than any suede worn by an animal! . . . Last Monday at Charmante's we saw a fine selection of man-made suedes from the Big Three manufacturers in this type of garments . . . From Brodkin there are coats, suits and separates . . . From Olympic you'll find lovely dresses, coats, suits and separate skirts, blazers and jackets . . . while from Majestic there are coats and suits . . . many of them in petite sizes which will be especially appreciated by the little woman . . . Without specifying which manufacturer made what . . . we'll tell you that Charmante's collection of man-made suede coats is the best they've ever had . . . There are double and single breasted styles . . . some with mandarin collars . . . one in two-tones of grey. (Grey, by the way, is a much-wanted color this season and Charmante's has a lot of greys in coats, suits, jackets and skirts.) . . . They have two styles of separate blazers . . . a one-button and a 3-button . . . in a beautiful new shade called dove . . . a soft, pale, delicate beige like the underside of a dove's wing! . . . Separate skirts come in several attractive styles . . . the very latest style a front wrap with a double row of buttons . . . Then there's an A-line, a plain wrap and the classic style with front slit . . . at . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

A very special South Pacific cruise! . . .

A very special Princess cruise to the South Pacific is coming up next fall . . . 55 days round-trip cruise aboard the Pacific Princess from Los Angeles on Sept. 26 . . . back to L.A. Nov. 20 . . . and what makes it so special . . . apart from all the fascinating ports of call and the delights of cruising on this beautiful ship, of course, is that Princess Cruises is offering you three different options, with fantastic incentives, so read on carefully . . . 1. Full 55-day cruise . . . 2. 28 days from L.A. to Sydney . . . 3. 27 days from Sydney to Los Angeles . . . And here's what you get: Free flights to and from your ship to Vancouver; one-way travellers get a 3-night stopover in Sydney or Honolulu; full cruise passengers get a special tour in Sydney free; if you're taking a one-way cruise you'll get a credit of $500 per person applicable to any Princess cruise in 1981 . . . or $1000 per person credit for full-cruise passengers . . . If you book on or before May 15, one-way passengers get a $100 credit applicable to their shipboard account . . . and $200 credit if they're making the round trip . . . Finally, if space permits, two adult passengers may take a friend or relative in their cabin free. (In this case, however, the other offerings don't apply.) . . . But just think what savings this would represent for, say, three ladies who are friends and would like to travel together . . . they'd be able to divide two fares three ways! . . . Interested? See Paulin's just as quickly as possible! . . . Paulin Travel, 532 Broughton St., 382-9168.

New Ports cottons at Eaton's . . .

We know you'll love the Ports cottons which are just in at Eaton's Signature Shop! . . . There are 100% cotton chambray shirt dresses with either long or short sleeves, buttoned down the front and with a nice back yoke . . . in soft shades of green, blue, off-white and tan . . . These co-ordinate really nicely with the Liberty print dresses by Ports which arrived in a previous shipment, because the colors are eminently complementary . . . In this same chambray fabric there are pants and skirts, in off-white and cream . . . Other new Ports dresses . . . with long or short sleeves . . . are in crinkle cotton . . . Not only in the traditional colors you've seen before like sage, claret, black and ecru . . . but in nice new colors like turquoise, tomato red and jade green . . . Dresses are in one and two-piece styles . . . We think the cream one is especially nice because you can wear it as a dress or a coat . . . co-ordinate it with matching pants and a bright shirt for a terrifically smart outfit! . . . And speaking of shirts . . . there are umpteen styles of Ports T-shirts . . . round, oval and V-necks . . . in a kaleidoscope of bright colors . . . Shirts you'll find dozens of uses for this summer! . . . Ports things, you know, are real classics which will never go out of style . . . They'll give you real fashion mileage at any season of the year! . . . Eaton's Signature Shop, 382-7141, local 242.

City slickers sickly? Don't believe those hick stories

VANCOUVER (CP) — City apartment dwellers, long considered the worse for wear because of their congested living conditions, possibly are just as healthy as rural residents, says a clinical psychologist who has written a book about the things in cities that kill people.

And Dr. Malcolm Weinstein says city dwellers may even be healthier than their country cousins.

The reason may be that high density settlers develop their own social support systems that might prove to be a preventive factor in disease, he says.

"Obviously what is needed is a careful study of high-rises and other places where people live in close contact with others," says Weinstein, director of planning for the Vancouver health department.

It has been proved that rats and most other animals go crazy when they're put in too-close contact with each other, he says, but so far there is no proof that humans do.

Living in and around other people provides human support networks that can be a preventive factor in disease, he says.

"A one-year study of 5,000 residents of Alameda County, Calif. showed four times the mortality rate among people who lacked the support of family, friends and social groups than occurred among those who had that support."

Weinstein says when he started writing his book, Health in the City: Environmental and Behavioral Influences, it was with the belief that cities are unhealthy places to live.

"In doing the research I found quite the reverse to be true," he says. "Cities are healthier places than they have ever been."

One reason is that immunization has resulted in consideraly fewer people dying of diseases than 100 years ago. Weinstein says that in 1976 only five per cent of Vancouver deaths were caused by pneumonia and infectious diseases compared with 40 per cent in 1911.

Major killers today are motor-vehicle accidents, cancer, heart disease and probably cirrhosis of the liver, he says.

"These are fatalities that reflect our patterns of living."

Also under investigation as a detrimental factor in city residents' health is stress.

"The study of stress is a whole new field of behavioral medicine," Weinstein says.

Because of the importance of the stress factor in illness, Health and Welfare Canada has started a three-year, $275,000 research project for use by doctors and other health specialists on stress management. Weinstein is one of four consultants on the project.

Interferon study spurs burst of hope

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Interferon has captured the imagination, the hopes and the dreams of everyone who is involved in good health.

Our entire social and economic existence depends on good health. It is a commodity we all take for granted until we are deprived of it. Then we concentrate on the return to good health only to take it for granted again until we are once more deprived of it.

It is fitting that all of us should be excited about interferon. For it is a remarkable substance that holds tremendous potential for the control of disease.

Interferon is a special protein that is manufactured in the human body. Cells that are infected by a virus produce interferon as the body's major defense against viral infections. The common cold, hepatitis, and even cancer may be attacked by interferon. It all works in a remarkable way. The protein stops the reproduction and spread of the virus.

It is believed that there are four or more different types of interferon. It is expected that many new forms will be forthcoming as research continues. Up to now small amounts of interferon were available for research. Now the brilliant achievements of genetic engineering make it possible to manufacture interferon on bacteria rather than by using normal human cells. This means that larger quantities will be manufactured and that it will be easier to obtain without astronomical cost.

To date interferon is being tried in the treatment of hepatitis, herpes infections, and in some areas in the treatment of some types of cancer.

Active research is underway using interferon against advanced cancers of the breast, multiple myeloma (a bone marrow cancer), and in the treatment and control of some cases of cancer of the lymphatic glands.

Based on the work that is being done in Europe and in the United States, it can be said that interferon has made inroads into finding the eventual cure for cancer.

This remarkable protein may have wide applications in the treatment of the common cold, rabies, encephalitis, and a host of other diseases of viral origin.

When such an important substance has been created everyone is impatient to see the direction of its application. It is believed that the clinical trials that are now in progress should take another four or five years for complete evaluation. By that time too the regulatory agencies, such as the Food and Drug Administration, will have completed their own study of safety requirements.

Dr. Coleman welcomes questions from readers. Please write to him in care of the Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria, V8W 2N4.

Dear Abby:

I am a 22-year-old guy. I saw this pretty girl, so I asked her for her phone number and she gave it to me.

I called her up and asked her if she wanted to go out with me, and she said, "I don't care." She told me where she lived so I picked her up.

I really fell for this girl, and she must have liked me, too, because we went out a lot after that, but no matter what I asked her, she always said, "I don't care." She has never given me a yes or no!

We are engaged now, and nothing has changed. She still answers every question with "I don't care."

What is the matter with a girl like that?

A Guy, Prince Edward Island

Dear Guy:

She sounds like a girl who can't say no, but whose mother told her never to say yes.

Dear Abby:

You have said in your column that there is no reason why a man can't be sexually active at 80. My husband interprets this to mean that a man can be just as good sexually at 60 as he was at 25.

Now I have discussed this with my doctor, and he says that as a man grows older his sex drive just naturally diminishes. But with people like you insisting that a man should be able to perform as well at 60 as he did when he was 25, it makes my husband feel inadequate.

Why not just admit that all men slow down, so they won't feel guilty when they do?

Wife and Realist

Dear Realist:

I have also discussed it with doctors, as well as with gerontologists, and the consensus is that a normal, healthy man can continue to be sexually active as long as he wants to — regardless of age. In other words, if you don't use it — you lose it.

Meet Stanley who got a book all about money for Christmas

CHULA VISTA, Calif. (AP) — When 11-year-old Stanley Martinez speaks, you should listen. At least so says Stanley's stockbroker for the last three years E.F. Hutton's Kurt Sax.

"It was all his idea to sell his Xerox stock last September at the top, just before the market broke," recalled Sax. "It hasn't been higher since."

How much did Stanley make?

"I'll tell you this much — it was more than a couple of hundred dollars," said Sax.

Stanley isn't in it just for the money. He gives the other kids good tips about how to stretch their nickels and dimes, although he charges his father 12-per-cent interest on their $1,000 son-to-father loan — but just to teach Stanley Sr. how to save.

The kids at Mueller elementary school, where Stanley is student body president, are getting his pitch to sign up for financial advice at $2 an hour, but they're leery.

Said his father: "He goes to the kids' houses and talks to them about things their parents don't even understand. Stanley has a problem not appearing to be something he isn't, like a con man."

It all began at Christmas 1975 when Stanley was six and a man gave him a book about money. In a few months, all his savings were in Ralston Purina, and his stock today pays quarterly dividends.

In 1978, he visited an art gallery on a Sunday and put down some pocket change on a Norman Rockwell print which the artist had signed.

"On Wednesday I heard in the paper where Rockwell had just died," Stanley recalled.

"The value of the work went up 33 cents that day and by the next Sunday another 33 cents so I made 66 cents in a week. Right now, it's worth in the area of $2,600 to $3,000," he said.

"Right now, I'm investing in rare coins. You can purchase a coin for its bullion value and for the numismatic value which will keep going up even if the bullion value falls."

The tousle-haired youngster has two savings accounts and earns $20 a week for working the cash register and selling items in one of the two San Diego gift shops his parents operate. He has worked six or seven-hour stints there on weekends since the age of eight, but he finds time to read the business pages of several newspapers.

He is an altar boy who serves mass every Sunday at Immaculate Conception Roman Catholic Church. His grades are just under an A average. He plays golf with his dad, a factory toolmaker, and now is getting into shape for another summer as a pitcher or outfielder for the Cougars' Little League team.

Timing, said Stanley, is the best weapon in playing — whether baseball or the stock market.

"I try to find the major trends which would help determine when is the best time to buy and sell," he said in an interview.

"The greatest factor is timing. If you don't have good timing, you can't make good money in it. A recent researcher said — and he's about right — that 98 per cent of those who invest in the stock market don't make money. One per cent break even and one per cent make money. So timing is important."

Typing gives grads break in job market

TORONTO (CP) — If you can't get a job after university, you can always take typing.

A growing number of graduates are — especially those who majored in the arts, only to discover no one would hire them.

At least a half a dozen community colleges in Ontario now offer short, intensive secretarial courses in the summer — for university students only. Most participants are women.

However, what sort of jobs they get isn't known because the short courses are non-credit and no follow-up studies are made.

Officials at McMaster University in Hamilton have persuaded administrators at Mohawk College of Applied Arts and Technology to start such a course next month.

"It seems to me that a person who has a degree, and wants to get a foot on the botttom rung of the career ladder in industry, stands a better chance with secretarial skills," said McMaster president Arthur Bourne.

The concept was pioneered by Marg Samuel, chairman of the secretarial studies department at Sheridan College in Oakville, Ont.

A former university teacher in Scotland, she imported the idea of an intensive secretarial course when she moved to Canada and found "jobs were hard to get for graduates."

The course ran from 1972 to 1976, was abandoned for two years because of dwindling enrolment and then, "We found the job market was poor again and we started the program up again."

Sheridan's six-week course teaches typing, accounting, machine transcription and office practice. It has been used primarily by university arts students.

Richard Piner, chairman of the secretarial sciences program at Fanshawe College in London, Ont., said its program "has gone far beyond our expectations."

It's possible to offer university students short, intense programs because of their skill in English and ability to work on their own, Piner said.

"They learn in 12 weeks what it takes most people eight months to learn."

And since most graduates know they're going to have trouble finding a job, he said, they're more single-minded about achieving in the course.

"Secretarial science isn't a career for most but it's a way to get them in."

Is your redwood furniture a driftwood gray? Take the time to scrub it with a brush and a solution of one cup of trisodium-phosphate (TSP from a paint or hardware store) and the wood reddens again. (TSP is a potent cleanser, so wear rubber gloves.) When the wood's dry, a water-repellent finish will slow weathering and protect against mildew.

A tight closet keeps out moths. And fresh air, as well, warn fabric specialists. Fume-fading is a color loss or change caused by a high concentration of air pollution, usually in closets and drawers where no air circulates. Silks, satins, taffetas woollens — almost any fabric is affected if it holds dye sensitive to normal atmosphere in your home.

Seedlings rotting off at the soil level is a big disappointment for the gardener who planted the seeds. To prevent "damping off" fungus, use sterilized potting soil (or bake garden soil at 300° F. for an hour), and seeds treated with a fungicide or a very mild solution of fungicide to dampen the peat moss added to soil. Then, too, don't overwater seedlings; many beginners do.

Finish off all those quilts and enter the competition

Now that spring is here and before we get busy gardening, I must remind you to write for your entry forms and Handcraft Prize List from the Canadian National Exhibition.

There are a number of categories and classes, and a number of commercial companies are offering special cash prizes. These include J & P Coats (Canada) Ltd., Patons & Baldwins and Chatelaine magazine, and the Ontario Hooking Craft Guild, to name just a few.

Wedgewood is offering special prizes for pottery, ceramic and soapstone sculpture while a number of food companies are supporting the baking and home preserves.

There is a new category of Patchwork for which Coats are giving a special prize.

So hurry and finish off those quilts and enter the competition!

For your entry forms and prize list, write to Elsa Jenkins, Manager of Women's Division & Better Living Centre, Exhibition Place, Toronto, Ontario, M6K 3C3.

Edmonton's Klondike Days Exposition will be July 16-26, 1980, and they too have their prize list printed. There will be special categories to celebrate Alberta's 75th anniversary.

I have also received the Western Fair Home Arts Premium List. This fair, although much smaller than the previous two, is one of the older continuous fairs of Ontario. The prize list and entry forms can be obtained from Western Fair Association, P.O. Box 4550, Stn. "C", London, Ontario. N5W 5K3. The dates of this fair are September 5-14.

There is also the Pacific National Exhibition in Vancouver, but to date I have not received their prize list..

Of course there are a number of smaller and still interesting fairs held around the country.

I have a request from a reader who is trying to locate a pattern.

She writes: "Years ago I used to make crochet heart-shape cushions with two rows of ribbon between the middle and the edge. I'm getting on in years and have forgotten how I used to make them."

If anyone has such a pattern or could write out the insructions for her, I would appreciate it. She is Mrs. Florence Smith, 11445-41st, Apt. 103, Edmonton, Alberta, T6S 0R5.

This week's pattern is Luncheon Place Mats. Beautiful heavy crochet motifs give these mats an ultra modern look. Four of these place mats would make a lovely present for that June bride.

To order Leaflet No. 7566, send 75 cents plus a stamped, self-addressed envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of mailing and print your name and address.

Send to: May E. MacLraen Knit & Chat, 486 Montford Dr., Dollarddesormeaux, Quebec, H9G 1M6.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. All back numbers of any series are available for 75 cents each. The catalogue of gift and bazaar items are 25 cents. All orders must be accompanied with a stamped return envelope or an extra 25 cents.

Making sense of dreams

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (UPI) — Two Harvard scientists say dreams may be nothing more than the brain's effort to make sense out of the events in a person's day — not psychological windows to the mind.

Drs. J. Allan Hobson and Robert W. McCarley, writing in the current issue of Science 80, said dreams may be an effort by the upper brain to unjumble messages sent to it by the lower brain during sleep.

The brain tries to process and interpret the sometimes contradictory messages, they said, producing dreams — an individual's bizarre, disconnected personal drama.

Hobson and McCarley said dreams are not completely meaningless, however. Dreams are initated by simple occurrences but are based on a person's unique experiences. How the brain puts them together shows a great deal about the dreamer, they said.

Vet can fix battle-scarred Buster

By DR. FRANK MILLER

Dear Dr. Miller: A couple of weeks ago, this big cat simply moved in with us. Personality he's got, but pretty he ain't. One half of one ear is gone, one of his big corner fangs is missing, he's got scars on his head, a big no-hair patch, scarred on one side, and he limps. The strange thing is that he eats like a horse, his coat has a nice shine to it, and he doesn't seem sore any place. Do you think we should have Buster checked by the vet anyway? We're hoping all his troubles are behind him.—H.E.

Dear H.E.: Very probably, Buster's behind is the source of many of his troubles, but not necessarily the end of them . . . Certainly he should go to the doctor for a checkup, but, probably more to the point, he should go in for some surgery. If he has not already been neutered, doing so now could solve some of his problems, though not, of course, all.

Dear Dr. Miller: I want to keep a pair of rabbits, but my mother won't allow it. She said I could have one rabbit, but I'm afraid it would be too lonely and get sick. Can you help me convince my mother that two rabbits would be healthier?—N.F.

Dear N.F.: Two rabbits would undoubtedly be less lonely than one, though I've known a lot of awfully happy pet rabbits who made it a very long time without any kind of partner. Your mother would probably be less reluctant to have you keep two if they're the same sex. In this regard, two males are likely to fight, but two female rabbits often get along quite well.

Dear Dr. Miller: It's just logical I suppose that my little canary, Goldie, will lay more eggs if she's healthy than if she isn't. But what about if she's happy? Could she lay eggs even if she wasn't terribly happy?—J.L.

Dear J.L.: It's hard to say just how happy Goldie would have to be before she began laying eggs, but hormones have a considerable effect on her happiness or lack of it. They have even more to do with her egg-laying ability, or lack of it. generally, good health does indeed have a lot to do with the process. If Goldie were in poor health, she wouldn't start to lay eggs in the first place.

Dear Dr. Miller: If you'd been assigned to take care of Cleopatra, an adult clawed frog, what would you feed her? Is there something simple that would be good for her but wouldn't get the water all fouled up?—N.Y.

Dear N.Y.: Your Xenopus could do nicely on earthworms, preferably fed on alternate days.

Gnawing stress takes toll in offices

CALGARY (CP) — Stress problems in Alberta offices have reached epidemic proportions but employees and company officials do their best to deny it, industrial psychologist Arthur Bolle said Wednesday.

Bolle, a member of the counselling unit for the Alberta Union of Provincial Employees, said stress-related diseases are taking a serious toll on the health of office workers.

Office productivity is declining as a result, he told a seminar sponsored by the local chapter of the National Secretaries Association.

Although there is a growing awareness of stress and related problems, companies have been slow to grapple with the problem, he said.

"Certainly a lot of employers are aware of these problems but most of them are not ready to implement programs which could result in the elimination of stress situations."

But many individuals try to pretend they are not affected by stressful situations, making it difficult for employers to recognize the extent of the problem, he said.

Fears about high costs involved in stress control programs were unfounded.

"They're just not that expensive and would more than pay for themselves in terms of increased productivity."

Unless companies take action, absenteeism will continue to rise as workers try to express their dissatisfaction with their jobs, he said.

Most job unhappiness is related to stress caused by either the physical office environment or deteriorating inter-personal relations among workers and management, he said.

"I don't see how you can come to any other conclusion."

Increased vacation time was not the answer to eliminating on-the-job stress problems.

"I think we all need vacation time, but that will not necessarily resolve stress problems because it does nothing to change the situation which caused the stress in the first place."

Bolle, of Edmonton, said in some cases companies should consider rotating employees into other jobs and out of heavy-stress situations.

The urge to merge is in the air. The idea of being together, always, has changed from a day-dream to wonderful reality.
You want to say so many things to her, and perhaps express your feelings with something symbolic . . . something as true and lasting as your own true love.

Lt.-Gov. terms extended

OTTAWA (CP) — The terms of two lieutenants-governor have been extended, Prime Minister Trudeau announced Friday.

A release from his office said Lieut.-Gov. Pauline McGibbon of Ontario has agreed to stay in office an extra five months to Sept. 10 while Lieut.-Gov. Gordon A. Winter of Newfoundland has agreed to a one-year extension to next April 1.

Mrs. McGibbon, the first woman to be a lieutenant-governor in Canada, was sworn in April 10, 1974, while Winter took office July 2 the same year.

Mrs. McGibbon, 69, was chancellor of the University of Toronto immediately prior to her appointment and has long been active in supporting the performing arts.

New Unionist Party seeks tie with U.S.

REGINA (CP) — The movement to join Western Canada with the United States evolved into a political party in Saskatchewan Friday, with Dick Collver as its leader.

Collver, until November the leader of the provincial Drogressive Conservative party, said he and fellow independent Dennis Ham, also a former PC, were forming the Unionist Party.

The name, he said, refers to "the best union."

The party will operate in the other three Western provinces and in the two territories within 60 days, he said.

Collver, who represents Nipawin, and Ham, provincial member for Swift Current, announced earlier this year they would sit as independents dedicated to joining with the U.S.

Since then, it's been learned that Collver and Ham qualify as a party in terms of the Saskatchewan legislature. They are eligible for more than $50,000 in grants.

Collver said it wasn't the money but the numbers of people behind him that led to the decision to become a party. Collver said he and Ham would use all of the money for their party and none of it for personal purposes.

"We had no idea that the support was so strong," Collver said. There was no indication so many people wanted to take action on the idea.

"The people are ready now to express in concrete fashion their dissatisfaction with compulsory bilingualism, and all of the other centralist dogma which is being perpetrated on our region," Collver said in a statement.

The new party will field candidates in the next provincial election in Western Canada, likely in Manitoba, he said.

Mountie top brass shuffled

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP has shuffled six of its top officers, Commissioner R.H. Simmonds said in a news release Friday.

Assistant Commissioner J.G.R. Marcoux, now commanding officer of C division in Montreal, will become deputy commissioner of Canadian police services, replacing J.R.R. Quintal, who will head criminal operations.

THE CANDIDATES' MATCHES

The matches to choose the official challenger to World Champion Anatoly Karpov and Women's World Champion Maya Chiburdanidze, both of the Soviet Union are under way.

THE BACKGROUND: The World Championship comes around every third year, though it actually takes four years to determine the champion. The current cycle provides a good example:

1978: Karpov and Viktor Korchnoi played for the title. At the same time, contests were held in each of the world's 12 "Zones" to determine participants in the next phase of the cycle.

1979: The Interzonal tournaments were held to determine the candidates. The three best players in each of two Interzonals (Riga, USSR, and Rio de Janeiro for the men, Rio and Alicante, Spain, for the women) were seeded with the last candidate eliminated in the previous cycle and the loser of the previous Championship match.

1980: The Candidates' Matches will be played to select Challengers to the World Champions. These are elimination matches.

1981: The World Champions will attempt to defend their titles and the next round of the Zonal Championships will be played.

THE PLAYERS: Viktor Korchnoi (Switzerland) is currently the third-ranked player in the world. He is 48.

Tigran Petrosian (USSR) was World Chanpion from 1963-1968. He plays Korchnoi in the First Candidate's Match. He is 50.

Mikhael Tal (USSR) held the world title from 1960-1961, at the time the youngest World Champion in history. Plagued by ill health, he has had mixed results in the two decades since. His impressive results in 1979 have made him the world's second-ranked player, right behind Karpov. He is 43.

THE REST: LEV POLUGAEVSKY, (USSR) is 45 and currently the fifth-ranked player in the world. He plays Tal.

ANDRAS ADORJAN, of Hungary, 29, is a newcomer to the Candidates' matches and plays Huebner.

LAJOS PORTISCH, also of Hungary, is ranked fourth in the world ranking. Has a powerful style of play. He is 42.

BORIS SPASSKY (USSR) was World Champion from 1968 to 1972, losing the famous Bobby Fischer match. He beat Portisch in a previous match, and plays Portisch again in this deciding Candidates' match. He is 43.

THE WOMEN AT THE TOP

NONA GAPRINDDASHVILI (USSR) dominated women's chess for the 14 years she held the Women's World Championship. She lost it to 17-year-old Maya Chiburdanidze in 1978. She is 38. At only 17, NONA IOSELIANI (USSR) is a great favorite. She will play SZUSZA VEROCI (Hungary), a chess professional from Budapest. NINO GURIELI (USSR) plays Nona. ELENA AHMILOVSKAYA (USSR) plays NANA ALEXANDRIA (USSR) and TANIA LEMACHKO (USSR) plays MARIA LITINSKAYA (USSR).

The solution to the problem above is: 1.Q-K2,-QPxN; 2.Q-N2 mate; or 1.Q-K2,BPxN; 2.Q-R2 mate; or 1.Q-K2,N-B4; 2.N-B4 mate, etc.

UIC smooths out appeal process

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is expanding appeals rights for individuals denied unemployment insurance benefits, giving everyone three chances to claim benefits.

For the first time an individual can appeal a ruling made by an unemployment insurance board of referees to a second level, an umpire.

Under existing rules, only an organization — a union, employee or employer association or the government — can appeal to an umpire.

Individuals who are denied benefits by unemployment insurance officials are granted only one chance to appeal under existing rules — and that's to the board of referees.

Another restriction will be lifted at the same time to remove red tape for anyone making the second appeal. The government is waiving a restriction which requires anyone appealing to an umpire to get permission first from the chairman of a board of referees.

In 1979, the last year for which statistics are available, there were 23,522 appeals to boards of referees of which only 17.6 per cent were successful.

Of the losers, 1,019 appealled to an umpire but the success rate has not yet been calculated. Of the 1,019, there were 207 from the government with virtually all the rest were from employee organizations.

The changes were announced Friday by the employment and immigration commission. They were authorized by Parliament more than a year ago but were held up as government officials sorted out administrative details, a commission spokesman said.

Their primary aim is to remove discrimination against individuals not represented by any organization, mainly employees of small businesses.

The government may have to hire more umpires if, as expected, many more second-level appeals are launched.

Appeals come from those disentitled or disqualified from receiving benefits for a variety of reasons. They also come from those penalized several weeks of benefits because they quit work or were fired for misconduct.

Grounds for a successful appeal to an umpire — which must be lodged within 60 days of a board of referees decision — include denial of natural justice, an error in law or an "erroneous finding of a fact made in a perverse or capricious manner. . . ."

Red carpet out for Alexandra

TORONTO (CP) — Princess Alexandra was greeted by the Queen's Own Rifles, a 21-gun salute, a guard of honor, a host of dignitaries and a nervous four-year-old flower girl when she arrived Friday at a Canadian Forces base.

The princess, colonel-in-chief of the Rifles, is here for five days to help the regiment celebrate its 120th birthday.

Princess Alexandra, 43, is the second child of the late Prince George and Princess Marina, Duke and Duchess of Kent, and 17th in line to the throne of England.

A somewhat reluctant Lisa Alexandra Simundson, four-year-old daughter of Sgt. Maj. E. R. Simundson, presented her with a bouquet of red roses.

Lisa got cold feet just before she was to make the presentation and her father had to do some last-minute coaching.

"We've been rehearsing for weeks, but she's very nervous,'' her mother Susan said. "She doesn't like the sound of the guns."

Eight-year-old Kimberly McCabe was waiting in the wings to fill in for Lisa if necessary. She'll get her chance to present flowers Sunday when the princess visits an armory.

Kimberly found the princess "very different" from what her friends had told her to expect.

"They said she would wear lots of pretty gowns and have her hair all fancy,'' Kimberly said, "but she's just an ordinary lady."

New TB chief named

Dr. Edward Allen, a recognized authority in chest diseases, has been appointed provincial director of tuberculosis control.

Health Minister Rafe Mair says that tuberculosis is not a common disease but there are periodic outbreaks and the main weapon against it is ensuring that active cases receive good treatment.

In another appointment, David Matviw, a research economist in the Manitoba economic development department, has been named executive director for policy development and planning with the B.C. agriculture ministry.

Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Matviw will advise on marketing complexities and energy and land use demands.

Calgary film studio delayed

CALGARY (CP) — Angry Tri-Media Studies Ltd. officials are facing an eight-week delay before completion of a local authorities board hearing on annexing 843 acres of land just west of Calgary for a movie studio complex.

Board chairman Charles Shelley ruled the Municipal District of Rocky View needed more time to prepare its anti-annexation stand and this week adjourned the proceedings until June 16.

The company staged a final plea for joining with Calgary at the hearing Wednesday, including importing Hollywood producer David Dortort to boost the case.

Dortort, creator and producer of such television series as Bonanza, The Chisholms and High Chapparal, raved about the proposed complex at Valley Ridge, calling it "a film-maker's dream."

Workers find mammoth tusk

EDMONTON (CP) — Part of the tusk of an ancient mammoth or mastadon buried under the site of downtown Edmonton for thousands of years has been unearthed by construction workers.

The ivory tusk, more than half a metre long, was discovered by workers excavating an underground parkade at Jasper Ave. and 103 Street.

"I thought it was a piece of (fossilized) wood at first," said McGinnis, 21, who happened to be a longtime fossil collector.

After Provincial Museum officials claimed the artefact and inspected the site, a piece was sent to the University of Alberta for carbon-14 dating to determine its age.

Minister's resignation sought

EDMONTON (CP) — A group of more than 50 mothers forming a new organization to eradicate child abuse in Alberta say their first task is to force the resignation of Social Services Minister Bob Bogle.

Nancy Leavitt, leader of the Mothers Action Group which marched on the legislature last week to demand Bogle's resignation, delivered a letter to his office Tuesday outlining growing support for the group.

Mrs. Leavitt, of Edmonton, led a march after a young girl was beaten to death last week. The child had been returned to the custody of her mother, an alleged prostitute, after living with her grandmother as a foster child.

Mrs. Leavitt blames Bogle for reports of child abuse in government-funded child treatment centres.

"It's a well-known fact the lines of communication in his department aren't working," she said.

Money for Upper Volta wells

EDMONTON (CP) — A tiny African nation will soon have more fresh drinking water, thanks to the initiatives of the Girl Guides of Alberta.

The Guides raised $12,000 for digging water wells in Upper Volta. The project was given a boost when the Alberta government gave an additional $4,739.

Big brother was well-meaning

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta government's attempt to offer 75th provincial anniversary scrolls and medallions to senior citizens led to questions in the legislature Wednesday about secrecy of citizen information in government computers.

The 75th anniversary commission paid the province's health care insurance commission to search health care computer files. The commission provided a list of 70,000 names of persons old enough to qualify for the commemorative items.

Walter Buck (SC-Clover Bar) wanted to know what guides the government has to govern retrieval of information from its computers.

Former worker raps board

BRANDON (CP) — Neil Peckover, a former company comptroller, says McKenzie Steele Briggs Ltd. will continue to show losses unless the board of directors is replaced.

After 10 years in office, he said in an interview the board has had a "long enough kick at the can."

The government has been trying to sell the seed packaging plant, a major employer here.

Peckover, in a telephone interview with The Sun from Grande Prairie, Alta. where he now lives, said the board and management are still trying to increase sales and add to profits instead of concentrating on the seed business.

"The firm doesn't have to grow, just do their thing and do it well."

Jet flight too hot for bees

CALGARY (CP) — Overheating is being blamed for the death of five million honey bees that were flown into Calgary and Edmonton from Phoenix, Ariz., last week in the baggage compartment of a Boeing 727 jet.

Alberta government officials told bee shipper Ken Orletsky a "thermal accident" was suspected in the disaster last Wednesday and United States government experts studying the problem have come up with nothing that would suggest otherwise, Orletsky told reporters.

About two million bees were found dead when the jet landed in Edmonton and three million bound for Calgary beekeepers died the next day. The bees were being flown from Arizona to replenish depleted stocks.

TAKING THE PRAIRIE SUN seemed just the ticket to these road-weary travellers on a stopover in Regina. Bloodhound, basset and great dane were en route to Halifax from Vancouver with owner Pat Lewis when unseasonable sunny weather made stopover too attractive to resist.

Manitoba hot spell brings earliest seeding since '59

WINNIPEG (CP) — A sudden spring has sprung Manitoba farmers into action for one of the earliest general seeding operations in 20 years.

"It's very unusual," said Al Martin, crops branch chief in the provincial agriculture department.

"The last time we had general seeding this early was in 1959," Martin said in an interview. "Since then it has been May before most farmers could really get on the land."

In fact, the quick thaw and sustained mild weather this year accommodated some farmers who were unable to harvest all their crops last fall before winter set in.

They were able to take off the wintered-over crops of flax, wheat and rapeseed which in most cases were good in both quality and yield.

Martin said that although Manitoba has had below-normal rainfall since last Sept. 1, there is no immediate danger of another 1930s dust bowl.

"I do my worrying one stage at a time. All I want to do at this point is see the 1980 crops planted. But generally speaking, farmers don't really need rain until mid-May."

The crops specialist said the earliest recorded seeding date in Manitoba was April 17, 1944. In 1959, general seeding got under way April 19.

"Getting on the land early for planting means the crop tends to perform better than if planted later," Martin said.

"Barley in particular does much better when seeded in April."

Early planting also usually means an early harvest which reduces the possibility of frost damage.

While moisture reserves are low, Martin said farmers can avoid soil-drifting problems by not working their land excessively.

Workers 'too busy' for fight

CALGARY (CP) — A Calgary detective couldn't believe his ears when he was told Alberta Liquor Control Board employees were too busy to call for police assistance as he struggled with a man outside a liquor store.

Det. Allan Irvine said he had a belligerent drunk pinned to the wall of the liquor store for almost five minutes, waiting for employees to call police.

He said six passing citizens ignored his call for help before one took his identification card and ran into the store to ask the employees to call police.

The man returned saying employees were too busy. "So I let the bum go and went to see the manager," said Irvine.

Sexy canines facing a fine

EDMONTON (CP) — Sexy Edmonton dogs who have not been spayed or neutered will cost their owners $30 apiece in licences next year.

City council approved the bylaw providing for the fine after a second attempt at third reading Wednesday. There was no debate after Public Affairs Commissioner Alf Savage told council the new bylaw won't take effect until 1 81 because licences for this year have not been issued.

Under the new bylaw, owners of spayed or neutered dogs will pay $10 for a licence as will senior citizens and owners of dogs who are too old to be be sexually active.

'Witch' tormented by punks

HAMILTON (CP) — "I don't harm nobody. I just want to be alone."

But the young punks who call her the Swamp Witch won't leave her alone in her ramshackle house about 50 kilometres from Hamilton.

They come from miles around to taunt her, call her names, throw beer bottles through her windows and stones at her. She's been robbed and even assaulted.

Caroline Pearl Schwartzenburg, 82, said Thursday she can't understand why she has become a target for drunken youths over the last two years.

She has no electricity nor amenities, just her dog, cats, chickens, her garden and a desire for peace and quiet. But almost every night and every weekend the carloads of rowdies come and stay till dawn.

"They drink beer by the load, they get pie-eyed and they come and torment me."

Miss Schwartzenburg has been robbed three times and recently a youth kicked her in the stomach when she tried to chase him and his gang away.

He was convicted of assault and spent three weeks in jail before he was given a year's probation.

Another youth was convicted of wilful damage and fined for driving his car though her wooden gate. He was ordered to rebuild the gate and has now offered to return to paint it.

Neighbors say she probably got the witch label when youths saw her stooped form returning from her barn late at night pulling a wagon and carrying a lantern.

Miss Schwartzenburg said she's terrified but isn't about to leave.

"This is my place and I'll do what I want. There's nothing I can't do. I don't want anyone pushing me around. I just want to live alone and be alone.

And she still hasn't lost her sense of humor.

"I don't care what they call me as long as they don't call me late for breakfast."

Pearl Schwartzenburg, 82, just wants to be left alone

An 18-year-old Colwood youth was given a nine-month jail term Friday in Victoria provincial court for a Dec. 10 service station holdup in Langford.

Erich Peter Tworuschka, of 995 Dunford, was also placed on a year's probation and ordered by Judge Lorne Pearce not to possess any firearms, explosives, or ammunition for five years.

Tworuschka pleaded guilty Feb. 25 to the armed robbery of the Pay-Less gas station at 2988 Jacklin Road in which $187 was obtained by three persons.

Paul Michael McHale, 21, of 762 Goldstream, was given a sentence of one year less a day Feb. 26 for his part in the holdup and a consecutive one-year sentence for using a firearm while committing an offence.

A third man, 26-year-old Gary Edward Trimm, also of 762 Goldstream, waived his preliminary hearing and was committed for higher-court trial on four charges in connection with the incident.

Pearce said he must consider the seriousness of the offence as well as the protection of the public. He said service stations and all-night grocery stores were prime targets and must be protected.

Judge William Ostler sentenced a Saanich man to three months in jail on a drug trafficking charge.

Ted Alvin Sandholm, of 5197 West Saanich, who pleaded guilty March 21 to trafficking in cocaine, was also placed on a year's probation.

Sandholm sold a quarter-gram of cocaine to an undercover RCMP officer Jan. 31 for $40.

Judge Blake Allan remanded two youths for a pre-sentence report and sentencing May 12 after they pleaded guilty to theft and possession of stolen property.

Jeffrey Ross Tucker, 18, of 962 Island, pleaded guilty to five counts of theft under $200 and Michael Wytze Devries, 17, of 1180 St. Louis, pleaded guilty to possession of stolen money.

A woman saw Tucker and a juvenile go into the pavilion change room while Devries stood watch outside.

The rugby players discovered that approximately $116 in cash was missing from their clothing when they went into the change room.

Allan said he was concerned about restitution and remanded Tucker and Devries until next month.

A 23-year-old man who came to Victoria two weeks ago received concurrent 30-day jail terms after pleading guilty to theft under $200 and possession of stolen property.

Allan also placed Norman Joseph Rochon, of the Salvation Army hostel, on six months probation.

Court was informed Rochon was spotted about 4:30 p.m. in Shoppers Drug Mart, 122 Douglas, putting a Gillette razon, Palmolive shave cream, five packages of batteries and a carton of cigarettes in a shopping bag and walking out. Value of the goods was $32, Laughton said.

Also found in his bag were three fishing knives, five pairs of socks and a tackle box, all valued at $77.74, which were taken from Spencers store, 1110 Government.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Norman Ross Fisher, 24, of 2878 Jacklin, $1,200; and Neal Middler, 29, of 180 Croft, $500.

In addition, Middler was fined $150 for refusing a breath test demand made by Victoria police.

City soprano, pianist team in Sunday concert

Soprano Susan Austin, a semifinalist in the nationally-televised Du Maurier Search for Talent, will be in concert with pianist Anne Crose at Emmanuel Baptist Church Sunday at 3:30 p.m.

It is part of the Interlude series, which presents the faculty of Pioneer Music Camp in concert.

Miss Austin and Miss Crose are on the faculty of the Victoria Conservatory of Music. A collection will be taken to help defray camp expenses.

Pioneer Music Camp is held at Quadra Island's Camp Homewood Aug. 23-30.

Pilgrim United opens new church May 4

The dedication of the new Pilgrim United Church, 3319 Painter Road, will be held on Sunday, May 4, at 3 p.m.

A new church for the district was first discussed at a congregational meeting in Gordon United Church in January, 1976.

Property on Metchosin and Painter Road owned by the B.C. Conference of the United Church was chosen as the site of the new building.

After many meetings it was decided the new building would be a hall with room allowed for a proper church at some future date. A name was chosen and work started. The inaugural service was held on the property on May 1, 1977 and outdoor evening services were held for the rest of the summer.

That September the church moved to the portable classroom at Sangster School but by Christmas it had grown and shifted to Pacific Centre on Heatherbell.

Another move came in May 1978 when it became increasingly difficult to obtain the premises on a Sunday.

For the summer months the church reverted to outdoor services.

In September 1978 there was a final move to Colwood Community Hall.

In January, 1978, Pilgrim United was commissioned by the Victoria Presbytery of the United Church as a part of a two-point charge with Gordon United Church.

In February, 1979, the sod-turning ceremony saw Jara Smith, chairwoman of Victoria Presbytery, doing the honors.

Another important crossroad came in July, 1979, when Pilgrim United became a separate pastoral charge.

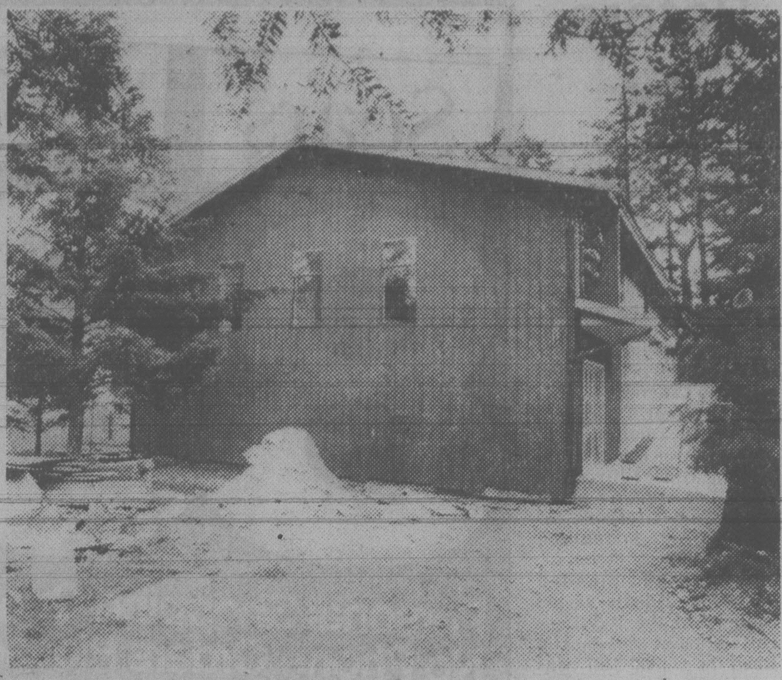
It extends a warm welcome to all to the service of dedication.



Church building is multiple-use

Training school choir performs on Sunday

The Baptist Leadership Training School choir will perform at Douglas Street Baptist Church, Vancouver at Pandora on Sunday at 7 p.m.

Under the musical direction of John Nelson Jr., this 65-voice choir will lead in an experience of worship through choral and instrumental selections, English handbell ringing, drama, puppetry, and words of witness.

The Baptist Leadership Traning School, of Calgary, Alberta, attracts students from across Canada for its one-year program, of development for lay leadershop.

Closer ties studied

The leaders of 12 Christian churches came together at Pierrefonds, Quebec, to design a study proposal for a new national ecumenical association to reflect the bilingual and multi-cultural nature of Canadians.

The meeting April 8-10 was seen by many as a significant step in building closer relationships between Christians in Canada. The proposal could bring together, in one fraternal association, the Anglican, Orthodox, Roman Catholic and many Protestant church bodies in Canada.

As a first step, the proposal for the new association will be studied by the 12 denominations which belong to the Canadian Council of Churches, the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops, the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Canada, several Mennonite Churches and the Council of Christian Reformed Churches.

Membership in the proposed association would not be limited to these groups. It would be open to "organized ecclesial bodies which confess faith in Jesus Christ, according to the scriptures and which therefore seek to fulfil together their common calling to the glory of one God, Father, Son and Holy Spirit."

The primary purpose of the association will be to give visible expression to the unity which already exists among Christians and to help them work together towards the long range goal of an even deeper unity in their faith and their service to the world.

The main function of the new association would be to promote communication and consultation among the members and to facilitate joint action when desired.

The Pierrefonds meeting was a study meeting and not designed for decision-making. The next step in the process will be for each group representative at the meeting to take the proposal back to his or her organization for further study, discussion and exploration of the question of membership.

Progress reports will be sent to the Committee for a Wider Ecumenical Fellowship, which has been working on the proposal since 1976. The Committee is presently composed of representatives of 13 Church groups. They will be responsible for coordinating the follow-up to the Pierrefonds meeting and the planning of an inaugural meeting of the new association in the first half of the 1980s.

The following groups were represented at the Pierrefonds meeting:

—Anglican Church of Canada
—Baptist Federation of Canada
—Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops
—Canadian Council of Churches
—Christian Church (Disciples of Christ)
—Conference of Mennonites in Canada, Mennonite Church (Region I)
—Council of Christian Reformed Churches
—Evangelical Lutheran Church of Canada
—Greek Orthodox Church
—Lutheran Church of America (Canada Section)
—Presbyterian Church of Canada
—Salvation Army
—United Church of Canada

Film story of courage

Sheffey, a major Christian film depicting the life of a faithful and courageous circuit-riding preacher of the 19th century, will be shown at Beracah Bible Church, 5500 Hamsterly, Elk Lake, at 6 p.m. Sunday. This 2½-hour long, full color film with an all-Christian cast, is a true story of God's grace.

Perspectives

By REV. J.A. DAVIDSON

I remember a young couple who a few years ago came to see me about having me officiate at their wedding. In the course of the interview the young man said, "We thought we'd get married and see how it works out." I asked, "And what if it doesn't work out?" They merely shrugged their shoulders and gave me those gentle smiles which well-mannered sophisticates like to use on us old-fashioned fuddy-duddies.

Some people today seem to think that the traditional marriage vows should be amended to read, "till death us do part or until circumstances do alter," or that another form, "as long as we both shall live," be given the addendum, "or until one or both of us finds it terribly inconvenient."

Christian marriage entails an unconditional commitment. In a Christian marriage ceremony a man and woman unconditionally commit themselves to a shared life for a lifetime. Christian marriage is not a contract with an escape clause; it is a commitment without counditions.

Of course, some marriages established on Christian commitment do break down. But this is always to be seen as a contradiction of the Christian ideal and standard. Divorce is sometimes justified between a man and a woman who have entered marriage with a Christian commitment. As the Quaker philosopher, Elton Trueblood, once put it, "There are situations in which it is right to advise divorce, not because divorce is good but because the alternative is so bad." That is not necessarily a repudiation of the Christian ideal of marriage: it is realistic recognition that there will be some failures among committed Christians in maintaining that ideal.

In recent decades there has been a tendency among many to reject the principle of the unconditionalness of marriage, a tendency to see marriage failure not as something with an element of the tragic in it but merely as something awkward and inconvenient.

The late Margaret Mead, the American anthropologist, wrote this a few years ago: "The most serious aspect of the divorce rate is not so much the number of divorces as the expectation of divorce." She added that she was shocked to learn that many people enter marriage "with the idea that it is terminable."

The explicit intention with which a man and a woman enter marriage is the key to the whole tone and quality of their life together, and will have a great deal to do with how they handle the inevitable problems and challenges and uncertainties of married life.

A marriage built on the assumption that it is a contract with an escape clause is one thing; a quite different thing is a marriage founded on the convictions that it is a life together for a lifetime.

(Dr. Davidson is minister of Dominion-Chalmers United Church, Ottawa.)

Bishop to be installed May 1

Archbishop David Somerville of the diocese of New Westminster will preside in Christ Church Cathedral at the May 1 consecration of Archdeacon Hywel Jones as bishop of the diocese of British Columbia.

Somerville will be assisted by Bishop Fraser Berry of Kootenay and Bishop of Snowden of Cariboo at the colorful service which will begin about 7:30 p.m.

Jones, who was rector of St. Mary's in Oak Bay for 24 years, will be the first priest of the diocese to become diocesan bishop since 1916, when Dean Charles Schofield was consecrated.

The sermon will be preached by Canon Thomas Bailey and at the end of the service Dean Brian Whitlow will install the new bishop in his Cathedra, or official chair.

Television coverage of the service by Cable 10 Victoria will begin about 9 p.m. and a repeat broadcast is planned.

A public reception in the cathedral hall—which is expected to be packed—will follow the service.

The cathedral's director of music, Beal Thomas, will lead the cathedral choir which will be augmented by representatives of seven other church choirs including 12 voices from Jones' previous charge, St. Mary's.

Four of the musical items, including Sir Hubert Parry's I was Glad When They Said Unto Me, were sung at the coronation of Queen Elizabeth and have come to be associated in the Anglican communion with great ceremonial occasions.

The consecration will also be the first diocesan occasion when the rebuilt cathedral organ will be heard to full effect.

The last consecration in the cathedral was that of Bishop Roy Gartrell in May, 1970. Gartrell retired at the end of 1979.

Hope is theme for Triduum

Hope strikes the theme in the Triduum in St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral, 740 View, beginning Saturday, May 3, at a 5 p.m. vigil service.

Rector Rev. Philip M. Hanley said the three days of services in honor of the Virgin Mary will be conducted by the Rev. Vincent J. Sampietro, CSP, a member of the Paulist Fathers from Portland, Oregon.

The services during the Triduum May 5, 6, 7, will be as follows:

Morning services: 8 a.m. and 12:10 p.m., mass and homily by the missionary.

Evening services: 7:30 p.m., rosary, sermon and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

The Sacrament of Reconciliation will be administered before and after each service.

According to the speaker, "the Triduum will focus attention on Mary as a sign of hope and solace for God's pilgrim people."

May 5, at 7:30 p.m.: Devotion to Mary in the light of II Vatican Council.

May 6 at 7:30 p.m.: The Rosary—(In Paul VI's document: 'Mariae Cultus')

May 7 at 7:30 p.m.: Confidence in Mary's Help—a meditation on Pope John Paul II's teaching and example.

Father Sampietro has been engaged in the preaching apostolate of the Paulist Fathers throughout the northwest in Canada and the United States for many years and returns to St. Andrew's Cathedral to conduct the third in a like series of services presented in the past several years.

A sincere invitation is extended to all to attend the program.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Sunday, April 27
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Seek and obtain additional information. Accent on basic chores, pertinent issues, employment, unique services, coming to terms with dependents. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. Get together with one who is "inextricably" tied to your interests.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Obtain valid hint from Aries message. Highlight nutritional requirements, reunions, dealings with family members who had been estranged. Libra, Scorpio and another Taurus figure prominently. Maintain moderate pace, highlight diplomacy.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Determine what you want -- you are likely to have requests fulfilled. Emphasis on change, variety, speculation and the number 7. Aura of romance surrounds scenario. Favorable lunar aspect coincides now with creative endeavors, speaking frankly with loved one.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You can complete business transaction. On home front decision is reached in connection with property, investment affecting family member. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently. Individual you respect seeks your counsel.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You receive call or message from relative "on the road." Keep plans flexible. Look beyond the immediate. Perceive potential. Tie loose ends of project. Hold off on decision requiring precision details. Genuine bargain available -- if you are a comparison shopper.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make contact with creative individual. Money dilemma will be resolved. Leo, Aquarius persons play key roles. Emphasis on valuables, personal possessions, ability to make most of available material. You can locate what had been lost, missing or stolen.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Stick to factual data -- leave speculation for another time. Piece together bits of information and you will arrive at "complete story." Scorpio, Leo, Taurus persons figure prominently. Imprint your own style. You're on right track and you'll know it!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Go slow enough to "smell the flowers." Elements of mystery, romance and glamor are present. Gemini, Sagittarius natives figure in scenario. Expand horizons, emerge from recent emotional shell. Hospital visit could prove fruitful.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on knowing what to do at right time. Wishes come true, business venture can be reviewed to gain fuller potential. You meet a charming individual with some very serious motives. Keep guard up -- definite gain indicated if you are logical.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Member of family talks about a journey. Be open-minded, perceive potential, gain through special publication. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio natives figure prominently. You get long-distance communication which aids in deciding direction, purpose, aspirations.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Determine costs, expectations, legal permissions, financial responsibility of close associates. You could become active in a "going business." Another Pisces, a Virgo and a Libra play significant roles. You are going to solve a mystery!

IF APRIL 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY people are drawn to you with their love and money problems. You are sensual, determined, stubborn, fond of psychology, law and drama. Aries, Libra persons play important roles in your life. You have "just" emerged from a crisis period. You will get on more solid ground. A burden, not your own to begin with, will be lifted in May. In June, you make exciting contacts and discoveries --and you could fall madly in love. You can be aggressive and tender almost at one and the same time. Major domestic adjustment is indicated in November.

Astrological Forecast for Monday, April 28

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A complacent individual attempts to "rob" you of your fire. Be diplomatic, but refuse to be transformed into a mild-mannered non-person. Accent on public response to your efforts, special information concerning legal rights, locating "missing links."

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Scout locations. Find out when and where a job is to be completed. Define terms. See places, people as they are, not merely as you wish they could be. Pisces, Virgo natives figure prominently. Check medical-dental appointments.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are in thick of events -- know it, get involved, imprint your own style, express views in creative manner. Personal magnetism soars -- members of opposite sex would vote for you in any popularity contest. Cancer, Capricorn natives dominate scenario.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You "locate" steppingstone to progress. Numerous forms may have to be completed -- you'll get red tape out of way in surprisingly facile manner. Aries, Libra natives figure prominently. Older individual provides rare insights concerning land, property and potential profits.

LEO (July 22-Aug. 22): What you recently submitted in "triplicate" surprises by bringing desired responses. Maintain independent stance -- deal with Aquarian and another Leo. Short trip could be on agenda and probably will involve a relative.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Spotlight on money, and how it gets that way. Check possessions, obtain valid appraisal from professional sources. Rely on recent lessons. You learn through process of teaching -- means impart and share knowledge. Cancer native is in picture.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Weight is lifted from your shoulders. You will have greater freedom of thought, action and there will be something to celebrate. Take initiative, stress independence, originality, confidence in your personal appeal. Gemini, Sagittarius natives figure in scenario.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Regard restrictions, delays as grand opportunity to "catch your breath." You could discover hidden motives. A dream, properly interpreted, proves prophetic. Review and revisions are on agenda. Another Scorpio plays domineering role.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Good lunar aspect coincides now with friendship, romantic interlude, significant changes and opportunity to profit from creative endeavors. Gemini, Virgo and another Sagittarian figure in exciting scenario. Member of opposite sex helps make wish come true.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Make necessary adjustments at home base. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure prominently. Ambition is sparked as one in authority pays meaningful compliment. Spotlight on career, honor, reputation, ability to make room for yourself in more "rarefied" atmosphere.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spiritual insight provides impetus for special, creative project. Accent on written word, long-range legal implications. Pisces, Virgo natives figure prominently. Open lines of communication. Perceive potential. You are going places!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Practical money affairs dominate personal scenario. You could be involved in power struggle. You rebound from apparent defeat. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure prominently. You beat odds where unique investment is concerned.

IF APRIL 28 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are determined, creative, obstinate, sensual and have innate ability as designer, interior decorator, artist or actor. Leo, Aquarius persons play important roles in your life. You write, travel and form liaison with special member of opposite sex during this year. December could be one of your most memorable months of 1980. In May, you make valuable, new contacts. In June, change of residence occurs, even if only through holiday trip. You are an original thinker, and you jealously guard independence. You have "secret desire" to sing or be a hypnotic public speaker.

Birth pains of golden age

By JULIAN REID

THE THIRD WAVE, by Alvin Toffler. Gage. $17.95.

A decade ago, in Future Shock, Alvin Toffler offered a fresh and productive new way of viewing the accelerating pace of social change, especially in relation to its impact on individuals and established institutions. And now, in The Third Wave, he addresses himself to a complementary task — that of sketching in the broad outlines of the future society which the current onslaught of change is destined to bring in its wake.

The difference between the two books is roughly equivalent to that between a doctor's preliminary diagnosis and his final, carefully considered prognosis. Future Shock pictured a society staggering beneath an unprecedented and rapidly increasing burden of technological and sociological transformations — transformations to which it seemed increasingly unable to adapt. The Third Wave portrays the same situation, but from a more detached and generally more encouraging viewpoint.

The third crisis

Future shock, Toffler concludes, is by no means what the pessimists would have it be: a symptom of the terminal breakdown of a dying civilization. Rather, it is the social equivalent of a pregnant woman's labor pains: the sometimes agonizing contractions out of which a bright new civilization is struggling to be born.

To place our contemporary situation into a broad historical perspective, Toffler argues that the present wave of social crises represents not the first but the third such onslaught to rack an unprepared and largely uncomprehending humanity. The first onset of labor pangs came some 10,000 years ago, in the shape of what some prehistorians have termed the Agricultural Revolution — a revolution which even now, in a few remote corners of the world, has not yet fully played itself out. It gave birth to a new agriculturally-based society, dependent on renewable energy sources like wind and water power, not to mention the brute strength of human and animal muscles. Largely rural, it was dominated by the principle of production for one's own use, augmented by a relatively small amount of trade and barter. But it also gave rise to the world's first towns and cities, in which our modern money-based market economy had its origins.

The Second Wave, the "industrial phase" of human development, began slowly and unspectacularly in England during the latter years of the 17th century. A mere three centuries later, it dominates the entire world. Today about a billion people have had their life-styles so transformed by it that it seems to them wholly natural to be living in that historical anomaly, a market-centred money-economy which holds sway over an entire planet. The society they have come to take for granted is summed up by Toffler in terms of a few key characteristics: It is "heavily dependent on fossil fuels, factory production, the nuclear family, the corporation, mass education, and the mass media," all of which are "based on a widening cleavage between production and consumption, and managed by a set of interlocking elites whose task it is to integrate the whole."

This familiar Second Wave civilization remains dynamic, and still continues its spread, progressively transforming the First Wave agricultural economies of Africa, Asia, and Latin America. But in its first-won strongholds, Europe and North America, its key institutions are already beginning to crumble.

Toffler dates the beginning of the end to the mid-1950's, when such crucial new technologies as the computer, solid-state electronics, systems engineering, polymer chemistry, the birth-control pill, and commercial jet travel were introduced or for the first time widely disseminated. But the crisis did not come to a head until the late 1960's, as the collective realization dawned that the growth-oriented industrial civilization of yore could scarcely hope to outlive the present century, thanks to the limits imposed on it by environmental and economic constraints.

Festering points

The eddies and cross-currents set up by the impact of these assorted innovations and shifts in attitude are at first sight dauntingly chaotic, and each is a potential festering-point for future shock. But Toffler urges us to look beyond this superficial welter of confusions to the swelling Third Wave of change they cumulatively herald. "What seems like chaos," he insists, "is actually a massive realignment of power to accomodate a new civilization" — one even now in the process of being born.

Such ideas, of course, are hardly new or original. After all, this dawning "Third Wave" civilization has been trumpeted many times before, under such varied labels as the Post-Industrial Society, the Information Age, the Electronic Era, the Scientific-Technological Revolution, the Global Village, the Space Age, and "super-industrial society" — the last being the term Toffler himself used in his 1975 study, The Eco-Spasm Report.

Nevertheless, the first 140 pages of The Third Wave have a great deal to offer to even the most jaded of futurological sophisticates. In them, Toffler supplies an admirably incisive and stimulating pre-mortem autopsy of industrial civilization, with all its failings. By contrast, alas, the 238 pages he devotes to the Third Wave itself are at once diffuse and ponderously repetitious. Fortunately, the book's two concluding chapters, a perceptive analysis of the problems besetting our increasingly anachronistic Second Wave political structures, offer something in the way of somewhat belated amends.

But for all these deficiencies, much of Toffler's material is likely to prove a revelation to the ordinary reader, unacquainted as he is with the extant futurological literature. Despite its turgidity, The Third Wave does an admirably comprehensive job of drawing together most of the relevant data relating to an almost staggeringly complicated society-wide transformation — one which, in Toffler's own summary, is "simultaneously a revolution in energy, a revolution in technology, a revolution in family life, a revolution in sexual roles, a worldwide revolution in communications, and a potentially explosive political revolution," — not to mention a far-reaching revolution in the hearts and souls of human beings everywhere!

Toffler . . . from 'future shock' to optimism

"The conflict between Second and Third Wave groupings," as Toffler argues, "is the central political tension cutting through our society today. On one side are the partisans of the industrial past; on the other, growing millions who recognize that the most urgent problems of the world — food, energy, arms control, population, poverty, resources, ecology, climate, the problems of the aged, the breakdown of the urban community, the need for productive, rewarding work — can no longer be resolved within the framework of the old industrial order."

The true value of this new book lies in its clear, persuasive message that these multifarious problems can nonetheless be resolved — though only within the framework of the emerging new civilization which stands as the natural, but by no means inevitable, outcome of this third great onslaught of world-racking socio-economic transformation.

Within the lifetime of many of us, this Third Wave has the power to usher in a wholly new social order, one which Toffler aptly characterizes as "a 'practopia' — neither the best nor the worst of all possible worlds, but one that is both practical and preferable to the one we have. "It could," he adds wistfully, "with some intelligent help from us turn out to be the first truly humane civilization in recorded history."

Haig-Brown fiction a pleasant surprise

By WALTER KELLYTHORNE

WOODS AND RIVER TALES, by Roderick Haig-Brown. McClelland and Stewart. $13.95.

Roderick Haig-Brown wrote the first eight of these stories in 1930 and 1931. He was living in England again after three years in British Columbia, and these youthful pieces reflect and transmit Haig-Brown's initial enthusiasm for the west coast and its people.

Especially its people: Dick Slater, "one of the new race," familiar with "the properties of granite and limestone and quartz and all the mysteries of mining" — and who falls prey to the power of a remote cabin and its cache of gold.

People like Buster, who carries a dying friend from the woods into town; like Johnny, "last and mightiest of the old-time loggers"; and like Jim, the guide, whose experience with the "American businessman, tanned by a few weeks' unaccustomed exposure to the elements," is an ironic part of western Canadian life.

A further five stories were written in the late thirties after Haig-Brown had returned to Vancouver Island and settled into a life as writer, fisherman and magistrate that would last until his death in 1976.

Two of these stories — "Spearheads" and "A Reputation" — offer ample evidence of Haig-Brown's development as a writer of fiction.

"Spearheads" is first of all an account of fishing, with all of the detail that only an expert could include, but with none of the boring jargon that would bar most readers from enjoying the tale. More importantly, though, "Spearheads" is also a story of the subtle meeting and contact between two timber cruisers and a native named Dickie Tammas who possesses some spear heads that one of the cruisers would like to give to a professor he knows.

Obviously the spear heads are valuable: both the narrator and Dickie Tammas know that. The narrator also knows that mere money isn't enough to pay for the spear heads, and how he goes about winning them is a perfect complement to the action on the river.

"A Reputation" is a far simpler tale: a boy's terror of wolves on the road home. We don't realize until the last four lines of the story — no, the last two — that it is also a tale of a boy's growing up. Years of every child's past and future are caught in an image that may last forever for some readers.

The rest of these 19 stories were written around 1950.

The quality of this fiction collection is quite varied, as one would expect from work that spans 20 years of a writer's life, from youth to maturity. And, as Valerie Haig-Brown writes in her editor's note, "I have no doubt that most, if not all, are true stories, and, in many cases, personal experiences."

Whatever the origin and quality of these tales, though, each is a pleasant surprise. Two more volumes of Roderick Haig-Brown's writing will be published in the same format and will undoubtedly provide the same entertainment. Al Purdy's preface to this collection is as delightful as the contents they introduce, and provides us with a glimpse of Roderick Haig-Brown that illuminates many of these pages.

Charmed lives

Korda brothers rose from humble family

By ANTHONY JENKINS

CHARMED LIVES, by Michael Korda. Random House. $18.95.

THE ASTORS, by Virginia Cowles. McGraw-Hill Ryerson. $23.50.

Charmed Lives is about the three Korda brothers who started from nothing and disentangled themselves from the wreckage of the Austro-Hungarian Empire after the First World War to found the British film industry. That story is interesting enough, but what makes the book particularly intriguing is its point of view. For the author is one of the Kordas' sons, and his account is equally concerned with what it is like to grow up surrounded by the super-rich who make their own rules in society.

The book is dominated by the most famous of the brothers, Sir Alex: "There was something about him that reminded one of a Renaissance cardinal, or a medieval rabbi, or a Whig Duke — an inherent nobility, a willingness to shoulder burdens, an acute, cynical intelligence, a sense of compassion artfully concealed by irony and self-interest."

Alex became the friend of Churchill and Beaverbrook, more English than the English in his conservative suits and hand-made shirts. He juggled enormous sums from one company to another, and was able to pull himself out of each successive disaster because he always lived like a prince and that luxury bred confidence in his financial backers.

The Kordas never forgot their beginnings as the sons of poor Hungarian Jews. Nothing gave them more pleasure than a full table, and nothing gave them more trouble than their wives, who could never be as close to them as they were to each other.

Zoltan, the second brother and the director of such classics as Sanders of the River and The Four Feathers, might chafe at always taking second place. But he spent his life commuting between Hollywood and Europe, in constant fury at never being fully consulted but always at Alex's beck and call.

Vincent, the youngest brother and Michael's father, had always wanted to be a painter; but Alex needed him too. Since the senior brother could do no wrong, had saved them all from starvation in the early days, Vincent became the artistic director of the Korda Empire.

"The point about the Korda family is that it's all built around Alex. There isn't anything else. If Alex hadn't created it, Vincent would still be painting in Hungary, or maybe Paris, and Zoli would be cutting films in Central Europe . . . being a Korda is special because Alex made it special."

Alex's wives were special and troublesome. Maria, a tempestuous Hungarian actress before the invention of sound ruined her career, saved him from the Budapest firing squads. But from that time on, she hounded him with dramatic quarrels and demands for money that stretched beyond the grave. The second, Merle Oberon, cared most for her status, though she never lost her admiration for Alex. The last Lady Korda, Alexa, was a young Canadian adventuress who inherited most of his riches but "confused wealth with happiness, a mistake Alex never made."

Throughout the book there's the sense that these charmed lives could have come crashing down long before they actually did, at Alex's death. And we also see, between the lines, how Michael, as the closest of the second generation, learned to live with that charm and eventually freed himself from it.

He fell out of the Korda orbit as a young child when he was evacuated to America during the war, but was suddenly pulled back into it as an adolescent when his parents divorced and he was sent to London. His father was an absent-minded eccentric who had once left his baby son in the care of Madame, the guardian of the tip-saucer in the toilet of a Parisian cafe, and had forgotten all about him until the next day. So Alex took control, showering Michael with gifts, advice, the aura of Korda-hood, and entre to a school for the super-rich in Switzerland.

We can only guess at the confusion and loneliness Michael must have experienced during that turbulent childhood, since those parts of the book are focussed upon his memories of the three brothers seen first in "Long Shot" and then in "Close-up." Only after Alex's death, in the book's "Final Cut", are we told how Michael had unconsciously come to model himself on Alex, as someone automatically special, even to the point of trying to gain Alexa's affections.

Michael woke from this dream during a further Hungarian Revolution, in 1956. There, amid the bullets, he found his own identity and realized he would have to make his way in his own country.

That he succeeded can be gathered from this book, where Michael is able to write about the past with such a warm yet knowing love. For despite his unassuming stance as naive court-follower, his biography of the three Kordas makes for a particularly enthralling autobiography.

I wish I could be as enthusiastic about Virginia Cowles' The Astors. Admittedly her book is not meant to be a detailed history of a dynasty but a fairly general survey with pictures. However, Cowles' approach is too one-dimensional and the pictures too ordinary to sustain my interest.

The book starts out brightly enough with the rise of John Jacob Astor. Having left his humble beginnings in Walldorf in Germany and earned a few pounds from his brother in London, he walked across the ice into Baltimore from a frozen-in ship in 1783. At his death, some 60 years later, he was a multi-millionaire, his fortune amounting to one-fifteenth of the industrial investments of the entire United States.

Though he had once charmed his way among the more important fur-traders and had trekked along wilderness trails to barter with the Indian trappers, his later portraits show him as humorless and hard-eyed. With all his millions, he could still fuss on his deathbed about some poor woman who had failed to pay her rent.

After the simplicities of that rags-to-riches archetype, the dynasty began to proliferate on both sides of the Atlantic, and the book's simple line cannot contain the confusing details of overlapping generations with similar names and eternally feuding wives. Similarly, the pictures which begin charmingly with line-drawings of early New York devolve into ordinary photos of streets, hotels, estates, and of this or that Astor.

The one noteworthy thing about the story is the way the Astors have managed to hold on to wealth and influence. The furs of old John Jacob have been translated into Manhattan real-estate, English country houses, diamonds, titles, and power that have so far survived the death duties and taxes of our modern, levelling world.

Eaton's wins hijinks case

The Eaton's store in the Brentwood Shopping Centre has been absolved of liability for injuries suffered by a Victoria couple during some Burnaby High School hijinks in 1978.

If the actual culprits had been known and named in the lawsuit, Mr. Justice Lloyd McKenzie said in a written judgment in B.C. Supreme Court, Robert and Doreen Walker, of 3346 Biscoe, would have had little difficulty in proving their case against them.

McKenzie said the Walkers, while on a descending escalator, were pushed down and stepped on by a group of teen-agers running up two or three abreast.

For about five years previously, the graduating class at Burnaby High had snaked-danced through the store and mall as an attendant ritual of graduation.

Up to 150 boys and girls had appeared annually to scream, sing, shout and hold hands while rocking and jogging in an excited, jubilant way without causing any damage to property or injury to persons.

It was tolerated by store management with a measure of amusement as a good-natured frolic and no attempt had been made previously to curb its exhuberance.

McKenzie said that on June 8, 1978, a small group congregated at the foot of one escalator and one of them shouted: "Let's run up the down escalator."

The Walkers were coming down and were pushed over.

McKenzie said the question is whether or not Eaton's was negligent in not foreseeing that the annual student ritual constituted an unusual danger which could produce damage and that it should have barred entry to graduating students or manned the tops and bottoms of escalators or appealed to the school or the students themselve to act prudently while in the store.

He said the Walkers' arguments don't succeed because the students conduct on four or five earlier occasions did not in fact constitute an unusual danger from which this incident could reasonably have been foreseen.

"Guards posted at the escalators might have prevented the action but in my view such a posting was not an action that a reasonable occupier would have taken in all the circumstances of the case and the duty of care did not extend that far," said McKenzie.

"Neither did it extend so far as to obligate the occupier to prevent entry into the store at all or to make representations in advance to the students or school authorities."

Col. Riddell promoted

Defence Minister Gilles Lamontagne has announced the promotion to brigadier-general of Col. S. W. Riddell, 49, commander of Canadian Destroyer Squadron Two at Esquimalt.

He will become chief of staff, sea, at maritime command headquarters in Halifax.

By LON WOOD

Baa baa black sheep
Have you any wool?
Yes sir, yes sir,
Three bags full.
One for your sweater
And one for your rug,
And one for your blanket
To keep you warm and snug.

If you own a pre-schooler, you already know whose lyrics these are. "He is a cosy, friendly sort of person, like Mr. Rodgers on two martinis," Sun critic Christopher Dafoe says of Raffi — the all-Canadian cult hero of the daycare set.

Whenever he sings his adaptation of the traditional Baa Baa Black Sheep or delivers one of his own compositions like Peanut Butter Sandwich, Raffi plays a dangerous game — entertaining children.

Kids, the sternest of critics, tire easily. They resent being patronized. If they are not happy their attention spans barely stretch to a minute. They do not suffer fools gladly. But when they like you — and they do like Raffi — their total lack of inhibition can be a blessing.

Next Saturday and Sunday at the McPherson Playhouse in Victoria, the 30-year-old Ontario troubador kicks off the 1980 British Columbia Festival for Young People with concerts at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. both days.

"We've had parents asking when he's coming back and we've got a lot of our children going," says Moragh Baldwin of the B.C. Government Employees Daycare Centre.

Raffi has three albums out — Singable Songs For The Very Young, More Singable Songs For The Very Young and The Corner Grocery Store.

"The Store album is the favorite of our children," says Baldwin, who adds that most other kids' records — including the massive Walt Disney series — tend to play down to young people.

"We've found his tunes catchy and he sings in his own mellow voice — like real songs for real people," she says.

Gerry Wagner of Modern Music on Fort says parents and kindergarten teachers come in droves for the Raffi albums.

"It's such a switch from the run-of-the-mill kids' stuff," he says. "I would classify it as educational — why else would teachers buy it?"

At Christmas, he said, record dealers in Victoria can't keep the trilogy in stock.

Cam Moore of Richard's Records met Raffi last year when he was here for Kaleidoscope Theatre.

"He's a very charming performer and person — really huge with the four to nine year olds," he said. "Very frankly, though, as an adult artist he doesn't do all that well commercially. But he has a terrific rapport with kids — and with little kids around you having a good time, you're bound to have a good time, too."

Helen Hill is a teacher at the Greater Victoria Nursery School on Joan Crescent.

"I moved here from Toronto where we were aware of Raffi just before he was known out here," she says. "Believe me, it was a real pleasure to intruduce him via his records."

Children, says Hill, find it easy to relate to his lyrics.

"His songs are extremely visual, and many of them the children can act out — the 'I'll clap my hands, you clap your hands, and we'll all clap our hands together' sort of thing. His songs just expand from one involvement to another."

While a lot of kiddie records are loud and jumbled, she said, Raffi and his sidekick Ken Whitely produce orchestrations where individual instruments can be picked out.

"In Corner Grocery Store there is excellent orchestration. Youngsters can hear the tuba; pick out the violin and the bells — and especially the guitar . . . Raffi's guitar . . . they relate to it."

Play game not theirs

By DAN TURNER
FP News Service

NEW YORK — This week, as the fragrance of the carriage horses' manure perfumed New York streets and black ladies with big radios shimmied in Central Park, Ottawa's own Michael Bate opened on Broadway.

"How often do you get a chance to play Broadway if you can't act or dance?" Bate had asked in mock breathlessness on the even of his opening.

Not often, came the answer 24 hours later.

The pre-performance question echoing off the Greco-Roman walls of the Beacon Theatre at 54th Street had been this:

Could a band of young Canadians upstage the Americans in their own back yard playing with equipment perfected and patented in the U.S. — notably trendiness, hype, tackiness, outrage and greed?

The proposed vehicle: The World's Worst Film Festival — a presentation of movie classics such as They Saved Hitler's Brain (1964) and The Incredibly Strange Creatures Who Stopped Living and Became Mixed-up Zombies (1964) - which had netted something under one hundred dollars for its investors when it played in Ottawa last fall.

Bate, the 35-year-old general in charge of the New York invasion, had at least partially blamed his home city's small-town mentality for this paltry financial return, noting with disgust, for instance, that only 48 people had showed up for the transvestite classic Glen or Glenda (1952) at the Ottawa festival.

Not that Bate, a tall, sparsely-curled philosopher who has dabbled in writing, movie-making and steel guitar, isn't very much part of Ottawa with his CBC radio, movie and music reviews, etc.

But it was his feeling that the Big Apple would open its heart more to badness.

About 200 celebs had been invited. Susan Strausberg, the European method actress of the '60s showed up (she is involved in a film on bad movies) but Dustin Hoffman, Woodie Allen, Shelly Winters and about 195 others did not.

A midget from one of the films in the festival — the all-midget musical western Terror of Tiny Town (1938) — was said to have attended, but nobody saw him.

Cheryl Rixon, a woman with a freckle-bracketed cleavage who was chosen Penthouse Magazine's Pet-of-the-Year for 1980, was on hand to present an award, and graciously went along with the theme of the evening by having bad breath.

The problem turned out to be a dearth of paying customers.

The Beacon holds 2,600 people and Bate had figured that if he filled the house three times for the three different movies showing opening night, the rest of the week's receipts would be gravy.

It was not to be — total tickets sold registered in the upper hundreds rather than in the upper thousands.

Considering that he had borrowed money from both his girlfriend and ex-wife to finance the venture, Bate took the news that he was not going to be rich with some equanimity.

He saved his moping for a small apres-theatre gathering at the Griddle Coffee Shop at 57th and 7th, the plans for trashing Sardi's having been called off.

May is the crowning month of spring, the flowering youth of the year before it ripens into summer.

No month could be more appropriate for a B.C. International Festival for Young People. That's what the McPherson Playhouse Foundation is bringing to the Playhouse during the first half of May — a total of seven days devoted to a presentation of some of the best children's entertainment available.

It all begins next weekend, Saturday and Sunday, May 3 and 4, when the Playhouse fills with the music and singing of Canada's own famous "pied piper", the dynamic Raffi — whose records have all reached gold record status in Canada.

Youngsters will be able to sing along with Raffi as he performs all the favorite tunes, and very likely introduces some new ones.

There will be four shows to choose from; Saturday and Sunday at 1 p.m. and 3 p.m.

Sharon, Lois and Bram will be here May 12 and 13. A top children's musical group, the trio has soared up the charts with their two marvelous albums for kids, One Elephant, Deux Elephants, and Smorgasbord. The former received a Juno Award as the best children's record of 1979. There will be three performances: May 12 at 10 a.m. and 4:15 p.m. and May 13 at 10 a.m. However the May 12 morning performance is already sold out.

Final three days of entertainment occurs May 14, 15 and 16 with an extravaganza of plays and music.

The performing groups from the mainland are Carousel Theatre, presenting their light-hearted production of Step on a Crack, and the Green Thumb Players with a happy-go-lucky comedy entitled Portrait of an Adult as a Young Kid.

Finally there will be Sukay, the internationally known folk band which will be performing beautiful music of the Andes on fascinating musical instruments.

Tickets for the Festival for Young People are $2 a show except for special Sukay concerts at 7 p.m. on the three evenings. Children 12 and under will still be admitted for $2 but for these three shows, reserved seating is $3.50, $4.50 and $5.50.

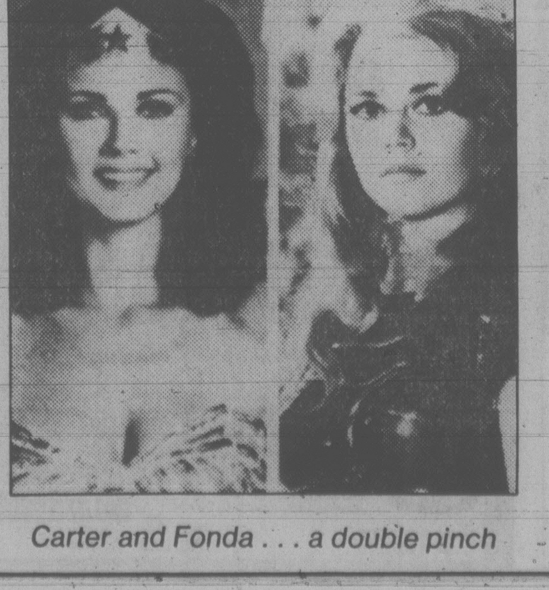
Barbarella and Wonder Woman took on the California Highway Patrol — and lost. Patrolman Newton Tobin managed to overtake the awe-inspiring twosome as they barrelled down U. S. Route 101 near Venura. Tobin wasn't impressed by driver Jane Fonda of Barbarella fame or her Wonder Woman passenger, Lynda Carter. Fonda faces a $50 fine for breaking the 90 km/h speed limit.

Forget that sex symbol stuff. Omar Sharif has decided he prefers books to babes. The Egyptian superstar — shooting a new film at in Las Vegas — is making very little whoopie these days, and he has a most distinctive explanation for abstinence. Says he, "I love reading in bed, and it's irritating to look up and see a woman when you're in the middle of a good book."

The author knows whereof she speaks. After all, she's been there. Margaret Truman Daniel — daughter of the late Harry Truman — is out with her fifth novel, and to celebrate it, she'll address the annual convention of mystery writers this week in New York. She thinks her father would have liked Murder in the White House — says, "He used to call the White House the great white jail, and he might appreciate using it as a setting for a murder."



Carter and Fonda . . . a double pinch

Philadelphia gossip columnist Larry Fields says there ain't no justice. He's being sued for $36 million by Mike Douglas who claims defamation of character as the result of Fields' criticism of him for taking his talk show out of the City of Brotherly Love.

Ted Giannoulas, better known in North America as The Chicken, kept it in the family when he recently purchased a $175,000 home in Leucadia. The former owner? Don Fryer. A week ago, Giannoulas won a court fight against a San Diego radio station — his former employer — over the right to appear locally in his bird costume. The London, Ont., native was the first entertainer to lead cheering while dressed in a bird outfit at major league baseball games.

Show biz isn't all glitter and gratification. Sometimes it's a thoroughgoing pain in the nose. Just ask Barbi Benton. She says when she was a regular on television's Hee Haw series, she was in constant misery. Seems she's allergic to hay, and most of the barnyard sets for the show are loaded with bales of the stuff.

Protest song spawns myth

records

by Issaac Williams

BB Gabor is a Canadian phenomenon in-the-making. He has sprung out of Toronto with an anti-Russian song, Nyet, Nyet, Soviet and the press has loved it. Record reviewers have exuberantly praised his debut album as the best thing since the Beatles White album and have created a myth in the process. Just who is BB Gabor and what is his music like?

The first part is easy. Gabor is a Toronto singer and guitar player who fled Hungary after the 1956 revolution. His anti-Soviet stance is a reaction to the Russian invasion of his homeland. His music is a bit harder to describe as Gabor does not fit into any neat pigeon hole. Reviewers have described his performances as everything from punk cabaret to new wave jazz with the truth somewhere in between.

Side one of the album opens with a short energetic rocker, Metropolitan Life, about survival in the big city jungle. The topic is not very original but the simple style and lively performance, complete with android style vocals, keeps the song interesting. The next song, Consumer, an anti-capitalist song continues in the same short style. The hit single is next and it is a classic example of the use of economy in construction. The verse "Nyet, Nyet, Soviet, Soviet Jewellery" is repeated over and over with just a touch of echo for added effect. The song deserves to be heard on every radio in the land! Not because of it's chic anti-Soviet stance but because it is a toe-tapping, singalong, rock and roll masterpiece. Up until now BB Gabor is doing quite well, watch out Beatles.

Next is Laser Love a slower anti-disco song (Gabor does quite well with his put down songs). The song features a disco beat with some intriguing synthesizer playing and a great 'macho-man' style vocal, hilarious. The only problem is Gabor missed the funeral, it was last November. Finally, Moscow Drug Club. The song, about an illicit underground pot and jazz club, is guaranteed to have you rolling on the floor in laughter. Gabor mixes some very corny lyrics with some equally dated traditional Russian music to produce a real novelty song.

Toronto's BB Gabor . . . escaped Hungary in 1956

Side two opens with what turns out to be the last of the good songs, Underground World. After this Gabor switches into a balladу format with more instrumentation and less energy. The results are rather boring. The songs are good but the laid-back L.A. style performance of Gabor and band make it an effort to listen out the album. The Beatles are in no danger.

As a first effort the album is good and full of potential, once the dead wood is trimmed. Side one is good enough to make you forget about side two but I have to wonder which way Gabor is going to develop. Will he continue writing lively pop songs or will he try to become another virtuoso balladeer?

It may not be fair to judge BB Gabor solely on the basis of this album. Most of the material was recorded last summer and presumably written long before that. Accounts of his live performances indicate that he is capable of a lot more than the album delivers. Try to see him live and judge for yourself whether the phenomenon lives up to expectations. He will be in Victoria May 8, 9 and 10.

Rural world unfolds in Schaefer show

By AUDREY JOHNSON

around the galleries

Forty works by Carl Schaefer, one of Canada's greatest living watercolorists form a new exhibition at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, opening Thursday. The focus of the exhibition is the 20-year period prior to the Second World War which Schaefer spent largely in the small town of Hanover, Ont.

Though overshadowed to a degree by the Group of Seven, Schaefer has his own stylistically distinct way of looking at this rural world. His art is said to have affinities with Van Gogh, Charles Comfort and Paul Nash, but in no way is this a detriment to the robust individuality of his vision.

Chris Varley, curator of the Edmonton Art Gallery which originated this exhibition, states in his catalogue introduction that these paintings "grew from the cultural milieu of the times as well as Schaefer's affection for Hanover ..."

The pictures of decaying farms done during the Depression years have a strong symbolic and populist content with their vaguely menacing trees and dark skies. The atmosphere is powerfully evocative and the color often intense and glowing.

The exhibition will be on view for a month.

Taken from the permanent collections are representative pieces including majolica, faience, delft, porcelain and pottery, displayed together with information about techniques, history and influences.

Included will be examples of Grecian red Attic ware, Hispano-Moresque lustre ware, Dutch and English delft. The latter is from a collection being purchased for the Gallery by its patrons and friends.

Several Chinese pieces included will help demonstrate what Europeans sought to immitate from them. A selection of English and European pottery, porcelain of the 18th and 19th centuries (Worcester, Chelsea, Bow, Coalport, Wedgwood) will mark the transition from Chinese-dominated designs, to styles reflecting the tastes of the individual countries. The 20th century will also be represented by some interesting pieces from the collection.

Other exhibits opening at the same time are Recent Accessions: Prints, an cknowledgment of the Gallery's many patrons and benefactors; and Three Swiss Artists. These are Michael Biberstein, Jorg Renz and Jurg Stauble. They will be travelling to Victoria to build works of art specifically designed for installation here.

Though all have exhibited frequently in Europe, only Stauble has exhibited in Canada so far.

An annual event looked forward to by many artists and art lovers, is the Saanich Peninsula Arts and Crafts Society May Show and Sale. On the 27th occasion it will take place Saturday and Sunday, May 3 and 4, at Sanscha Hall, from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m.

Guest artist this year will be Harry Heine, F.C.A. Formerly of Edmonton where he specialized in architectural rendering and design, Heine now makes his home on the Peninsula and concentrates on watercolors of ships and the sea.

He has been commissioned by federal and provincial governments, most recently for the Captain Cook Bicentennial paintings and limited edition prints. His paintings hang in many permanent collections, including Mendel Art Gallery, Gulf Oil and B.C. Tel.

His daughter, Caren Heine, will be demonstrating various techniques in watercolor during the show. She is noted for detailed paintings of flowers, leaves and fruit.

Nearly one third of the hall space each year is givenover to demonstrations of different types of art and crafts.

Woodcarver Charles Mackie and oil painter Jessie Stewart are two SPAC members who will be demonstrating. Peter Shostak will demonstrate the technique of serigraphy. Pat Webber will illustrate techniques for the wheel-throwing of pots, and unusual tchniques in weaving will be shown by Frances Hunter.

Other arts and crafts in process will be enamel on copper work by John Agg of Qualicum Bay and drawing in pastels, graphite and charcoal by Helen Rogak, winneer of a SPAK lithography scholarship.

Several members have won outstanding awards this past year and their most recent work will be exhibited and on sale.

An exhibition of drawings by Victoria artist John Russell goes on view at University of Victoria's McPherson Library Gallery, Monday. The drawings vary in scale and utilize a variety of materials. They display various urban, musical and mechanical themes done in a semi-abstracted style.

They will remain on view through May 22.

Canada Puppets tour

WASHINGTON (CP) — Coad Canada Puppets of Vancouver brought the ancient art of puppetry to the Smithsonian Institution today for a 3½-week series of performances.

The husband-and-wife troupe of Luman and Arlyn Coad will give daily performances at the institution's discover theatre as part of a program to explore the performing arts with children, a Smithsonian spokesman said.

The troupe generally spend about eight months of the year touring British Columbia schools with their puppets. The Washington tour was arranged by the Smithsonian with the help of Canada's external affairs department.

The Coads, who design their own puppets, are authors of six books on puppetry.

Can Anne's luck hold for Emily?

By AUDREY JOHNSON

It could be this summer that Canada's Pacific coast island city of Victoria will step into a limelight that has bathed the Atlantic island city of Charlottetown for a number of years.

Charlottetown is famous as the city where the most successful original Canadian musicals have been introduced; particularly the perennial Anne of Green Gables.

This summer Victoria's Four Seasons Musical Theatre will present the world stage premiere of The Wonder of it All, a musical play based on the life of Emily Carr.

Written by Don Harron with music and lyrics by Norman and Elaine Campbell, (the Anne of Green Gables writing team) the script explores the remarkable character of Canada's most famous woman artist.

Although originally intended for stage production, it was adapted and shown on CBC television in the 70s and has not previously been presented 'live'. The Campbells will be involved in the re-writing for the West Coast stage presentation.

The fact that Emily Carr's identity as an artist and a person, is so strongly woven into west coast terrain and aboriginal history makes the launching of the musical in Victoria, her birthplace, uniquely appropriate.

The production takes place in collaboration with the B.C. Provincial Museum at Newcombe Auditorium, June 27 through July 31.

Dr. Hugh Keenleyside, honorary patron of the project, sees it as the possible focal point of an annual festival reflecting the area's cultural heritage.

Director is Peter Mannering. Well known Victoria musical theatre conductor, Howard Denike is in charge of the musical side.

TRUMPET TRIO from Mount Douglas Senior Secondary, from left, Scott Wicks, Tom Essery and Andrew Bullen, warm up for performance in Victoria Music Festival brass, woodwind and percussion section under way Monday at St.Matthias Hall. Mount Doug has many entries in the five-day session but moment of truth for these three comes Tuesday when the word will come from adjudicator Dr. George Lotzenhiser, Dean of the School of Fine Arts in Eastern Washington University.

Open Space picks leader for roots of dance study

Toronto's Anne Skinner is to be artist-in-residence at Open Space Gallery for its second Movements Collaboratory which begins Tuesday and will run through May 24.

Theme is The Roots of Movement. The four week-program will explore the beginnings of body movement and how movement impulses are developed into singing, dancing, visual arts, poetry, theatre, video, music, design and so on.

Skinner will give several workshops of varying intensity. She is one of Canada's most innovative directors in theatre, movement and sound. She has mounted many productions in Toronto and Ottawa and given workshops all across the country.

The Collaboratory is open to people of all occupations. The only pre-requisites are an active curiosity and imagination, and a willingness to move past present boundaries.

A series of films on primitive movement and sound, trances and rituals, plus others on the movement of children and animals, will be shown during the period.

Participating with lecture-demonstrations will be Dr. Derek French, physician and Yoga practitioner; Kay Van Sickle, bioenergetic therapist and art therapist, and Dr. George Beer, professor of physics, University of Victoria.

For further detailed information and registration call the gallery at 383-8833 or Hugh MacPherson, 385-3830.

Austin Clarke not so stupid

OTTAWA (CP) — Growing Up Stupid Under the Union Jack is the first instalment of a three-volume autobiography by Austin Clarke, who didn't.

In fact, he grew up pretty smart in his native Barbados, winning scholarships and being nudged along by his illiterate mother, who scrimped and saved to make her dreams for her son come true.

Clarke, in a pin-striped suit and puffing on an aromatic pipe, concedes that the title is more eye-catching than accurate. Nevertheless, he insists, the environment of the English-style Combermere school, with its masters and rules imported from the Motherland, didn't jibe with the real world.

He was put into short pants like a proper English gent, schooled in the colonial spirit and introduced to The Times of London.

Canada council gives nice news to arts folk audrey johnson

The good news for performing artists this month, is the reinstatement of Canada Council's Arts Grants "A" program. Suspended in December as an economy measure for a possible one-year term, Council has restored them by carrying over to its 1980 budget a portion of the $2 million supplementary grant it received from the federal government in late 1979.

Arts Grants "A" are directed to artists who have made a significant contribution to the arts over a number of years and are still active in their profession. They are worth up to $19,000.

Each year the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto Alumni's Victoria Branch holds a fund-raising event to plump up its scholarship reserve. The scholarships go to deserving Victoria students.

This year the annual event will take the form of a French Salon with Francis Poulenc, to be presented by Dr. Carol Wootton on May 15 at 8 p.m. at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Over the years Dr. Wootton has developed a series of programs illustrated with readings and piano selections, to highlight aspects of the life and work of particular composers. She has followed Chopin and Brahms with the current one on Poulenc who lived from 1899 to 1963.

The program will touch upon some of the influences on this ebullient composer, many of whose piano works were performed in Parisian salons in the 20s and 30s.

Tickets for the performance and following champagne refreshments may be obtained by phoning 658-8672.

Three benefit shows for the proposed Globe Theatre re-creation have been announced by the Lord Chamberlain's Players. All three will take place on three consecutive days in May.

On Thursday, May 22, octagenarian Rudy Vallee will offer a two-hour show of songs and comedy at McPherson Playhouse, reflecting his career of the 20s and 30s. For older people attending it will no doubt provide an evening of nostalgia.

This will be followed at the Playhouse on the Friday and Saturday with Canadian actor (and the Globe's artistic director) Barry Morse in a one-man performance, portraying some of the great personalities in the history of theatre. Such people as Shakespeare himself, Charles Dickens, Bernard Shaw and others.

It's the same show that was taped by PBS in Boston four years ago and favorably reviewed when shown nationally.

There will be a concert of chamber music, Sunday at 3 p.m. at the Craigdarroch Castle, 1050 Joan Crescent. The Gallery Chamber Players, consisting of violinists Victoria Kereluk and Lillian Jen, violist Christine Prince and cellist Martin Bonham, will have as their guest artist, clarinetist Larry de la Haye.

Works to be performed in this season's final concert by the ensemble, are Borodin's String Quartet and Weber's Clarinet Quintet Op. 34.

Starting this week and continuing through the summer, are coffeehouse concerts featuring such popular west coast recording artists as Ferron, Dan Rubin, Pied Pear and Denise Larson.

They are happening on Thursday, Friday and Saturday nights at Sam's Deli, 805 Government. The coffeehouse will be open from 8:30 p.m. to 1 a.m.

Paul Finkleman is organizing genius and the prime motive for the enterprise, according to its promoters, is to be a supportive showcase for the wealth of talented folk musicians that B.C. seems to propagate.

An all-Schumann program of works for the ideal duo of voice and piano, is to be presented Sunday May 4 at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

The artists are soprano Anne Bennett and pianist Kelly Charlton, who will be performing the Frauenliebe und Leben; baritone Peter Bradley and pianist Lorna Paterson in the Dichterliebe, and Bennett, radley and Charlton performing some of Schumann's songs for this particular combination of voices and piano.

Concert time for this unique event is 3 p.m.

The mideastern music of Sirocco will be heard in Victoria May 12 together with a display of belly dancing. The event is scheduled at Norway House at 9 p.m.

Sirocco is Sulyman and Armando, two fine musicians who have been playing for dancers from California to Canada since 1971. Sulyman is a versatile instrumentalist using a variety of string and wind instruments; Armando is a percussionist.

The repertoire includes the four main schools of Islamic music — Egyptian, Persian, Andalusian and Turkish, performed in both folk and cabaret styles.

Conquerers left marks on North Africa

By CARLA HUNT

Julius Caesar, Alexander the Great, Emperor Constantine and Sherif Idriss of Arabia all had one thing in common: an overwhelming lust for the fabled lands of North Africa. Their legions came, they saw and conquered, leaving monumental remembrances to things past and their cultural imprint on the present.

West along the Mediterranean coast from Carthage towards the Atlantic beaches of Casablanca, armies of Islam marched in the 7th century, following in the footsteps of the Romans whose great stone arches and amphitheatres dot the North Africa shores and roads to the interior. Inland over the Atlas Mountains and down to the Sahara, camel caravans still plod historic tracks between isolated oases and deserted outposts of the French Foreign Legion.

Approximately 1,200 years before Christ, the Phoenicians landed in North Africa and founded Carthage. Its ruins lie just outside Tunis.

From the sea, Tunis looks idyllic, a cosmopolitan playground of beaches stretching north and south past sparkling white buildings and clustered palms. In Tunis the greatest attraction is the medina, the commercial and social centre of all North African settlements large and small. This is the native quarter where buying everything from slippers to rugs and birdcages call for crafty bargaining — a process that requires an outward look of quiet disinterest when one is decidedly interested — which is expected and relished by bazaar tradesmen.

North along the coast lies Bizerte, another Phoenician port established to serve ancient merchant ships going to and from Spain. Its tranquil resort atmosphere belies its history of conquest by the Romans, the Arabs and the Moors.

Algeria calls her Mediterranean shore the "turquoise coast", for the waters are just that color. In the fertile hills and sunbaked plains behind the coastline are historic ruins and fascinating people rarely visited.

Tribes such as the Taureg (called "blue people" because their indigo robes sometimes color their skins) have survived centuries of invasion in their mountain strongholds and desert outposts. You may see the Tauregs riding white camels across a distant dune and certainly they are present in the hilltop kasbah of Algiers with streets so steep they are often open staircases.

Here in the capital the Tauregs mix with Berbers, Mzabites and Arabs. Veiled women are swathed from head to foot, and burdened donkeys block the passageways, forcing passersby to duck into gardened patios or tiny mosques to avoid being squeezed against the walls. In Algeria, unlike Morocco, a non-Moslem may visit religious buildings whose interiors are usually beautifully embellished.

Morocco's oldest and most imperial city is Fez. As the spiritual and intellectual centre of this Islamic area, Fez has the finest mederas or religious schools. They often equal or surpass the architectural beauty of the mosques in rich ornamentation, woodcarving and mosaics in geometric patterns.

There are any number of arched entrances through the walls that surround the souks of Fez, a bewildering labyrinth of alleys leading to various areas of trade- such as the odorous leather souk or the dyers' souk where multi-colored skeins of wool hang in vivid rainbows on lines strung across the streets.

The second imperial city of Morocco is Marrakech which lies behind ochre walls at the foot of the High Atlas Mountains. Fragrant scents from orange groves permeate the air in palace courtyards and the odors of spices lead one to the medina and its famous Djemma-el-Fna, a circus of acrobats, storytellers and snake charmers. Overlooking the show are cafes where conversation in Arabic or French — the European lingua franca in North Africa — is punctuated by sips from endless glasses of mint tea.

From the kasbahs and ksars of the Marrakech region, it is a short drive to Casablanca, built on an ancient Phoenician site, Anfa. Its flowering gardens and broad avenues are reminiscent of Europe's Mediterranean cities but its architecture and people are most definitely North Africa.

While no longer a city of international intrigue, Tangier is still known for its delightful gardens, its kasbah and bazaars, its fine beaches.

On a clear day, a traveller can see Gibraltar across the Straits and realize how narrowly separate Africa and Europe are at this point: physically almost touching and joined by common histories and cultures.

Obviously the "Onslow" Hotel in Reno is extremely popular. Charter Buses and drivers are doing a great job to please our customers, and our amiable Escorts continue to make our Reno Tours the best available. We do have room for two couples on May 25th, and there is space available on the June departures. However, don't leave it too long, we hate to see anyone disappointed.
ROCKIES TOUR
May 21 to 31, Eleven Fine Days $375 Dbl., $395 Twin
It's very important to be at the right place at the right time. The Canadian Rockies at this time of year fits right in. The Mountains are crowned with snow, the rivers and streams are active, the fresh green grass and leaves indicate the arrival of Spring in the most beautiful areas of the world. Also, it's very important that the tourist hordes have not yet arrived. If you want to be "The right person in the right place at the right time," give us a call. We can accommodate six more couples.
ALASKA BUS/CRUISES
June 18 and 22, July 16 and 20 $785 Dbl., $800 Twin
We're proud to be able to offer these four timely departures on such a fine Cruise Ship as the "Odessa". It's a deluxe ship with excellent service and entertainment, offering roomy staterooms, swimming pool, medical facilities and comfortable lounges, served by extremely efficient and pleasant staff. The Bus portion of the tour presents a thrilling view of central and Northern B.C. and the Yukon Territories along the famous Alaska Highway, with tours of the Gold Rush Town of Barkerville and famous Bennett Dam en route. We have limited space on all four departures at the moment, but don't delay as they are filling fast. Don't be disappointed.

Czech clock with a legend

OLOMOUC — Every day in this Moravian city — the oldest town in Czechoslovakia except for Prague — the stroke of noon sets in motion the complicated mechanism of a tourist-drawing astronomical clock that adorns the wall of town hall.

Pipers blow their pipes, a cock crows and the carillon tinkles a Moravian folk song.

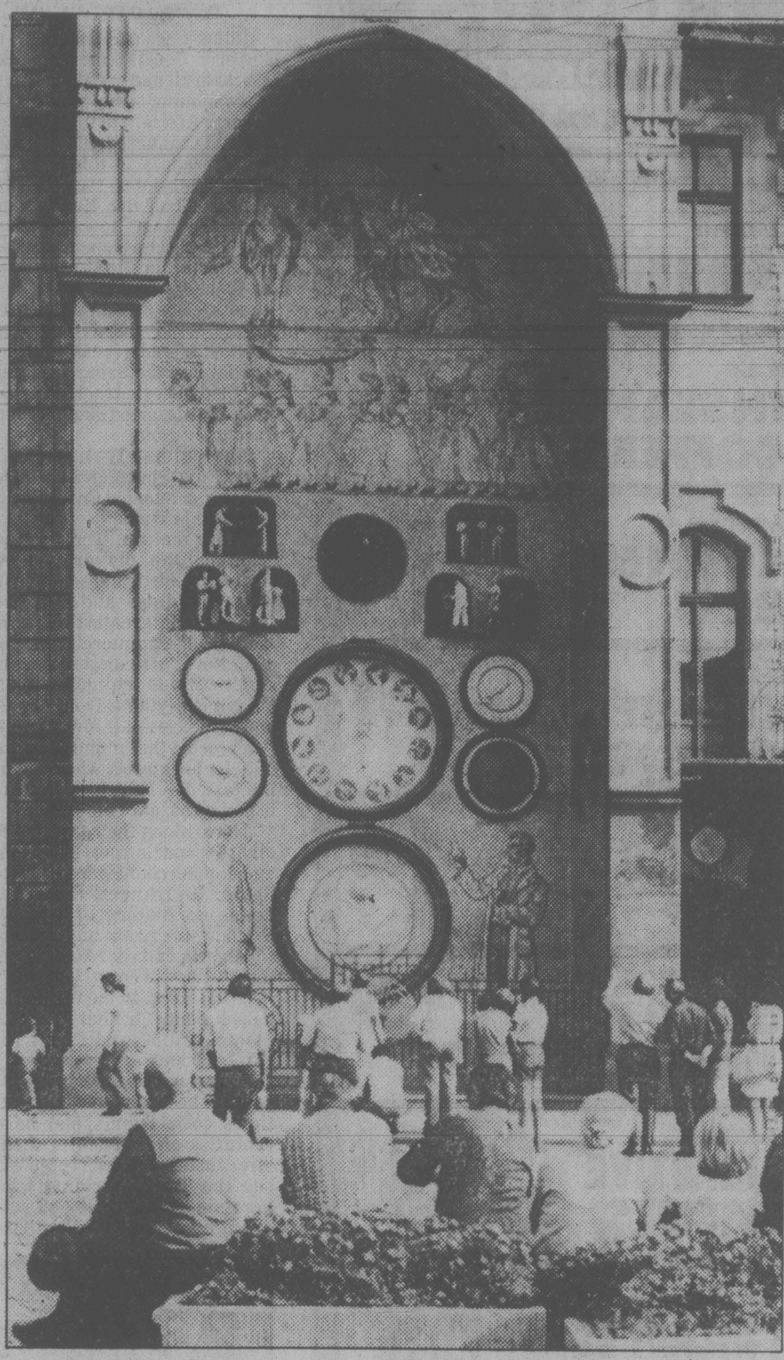
Like Prague's Old Town clock, the one here in Olomouc, 254 km east of Prague, has a legend about its creator, who is said to have been blinded after the clock was completed.

According to the legend, the clock was the work of a clockmaker, Anton Pohl, from Saxony who made it in accordance with a plan he saw in a dream. When he had finished it, the city council, fearing that he might make a similar clock in some other town, gave orders to have his eyes put out. But the old man, on the pretext that some repairs were needed, damaged the clock so that it did not run for years.

All that the legend has in common with historical fact is that a clockmaker named Pohl (his first name was Hanus, not Anton) did work on the clock, having been hired to reconstruct the mechanism between 1570 and 1575. The origin of the clock dates from the end of the 15th century.

By 1549, the clock was already measuring the days and hours and had moving figures. Hanus Pohl's reconstruction resulted in the addition of a planetarium to indicate the movement of the sun and the stars. The carillon was added later.

The clock you see today is a reconstruction completed after World War II when it was hit by artillery fire only a few hours before the war's end.



Tourists gather at Olomouc clock for noon mechanical show

with
STAN DELAPLANE

A bunch of the boys are whooping it up in Lincoln, New Mexico this weekend. Tomorrow it will be 99 years to the day that Billy the Kid killed two deputy sheriffs and shot his way out of the county courthouse jail. This was the way I saw it on a snowy day nearly 20 years ago.

There was a big sign on the gas station at Fort Sumner, New Mexico: 'The Last Resting Place - 'Billy the Kid'.'

"Fill it with regular," I said. "How is he resting?"

"Who?" asked the gas station man.

"Billy the Kid. In his last resting place."

"Oh, that," said the gas station man. "Well, now, the Kid is not buried exactly in the town of Fort Sumner. He is buried about three miles out thataway. Where the Fort used to be."

Fort Sumner was quite an outpost during the Sixties and Seventies. Kit Carson rounded up all the Navajos and held them here to decide whether they would put them up in Indian territory or let them stay in the southwest and sell blankets to the tourists.

Naturally they had to feed the Indians. And Texans like Colonel Goodnight and John Chisum and Oliver Loving began trailing Texas longhorns up to the market.

Out of all this cattle business came the Lincoln county war. The most energetic gunner was William Bonney — Billy the Kid, a juvenile delinquent who has become a sort of American folk hero. Though he did not kill 21 men by the time he was 21 — more likely eight — he was bad enough.

After he killed Sheriff Brady, they jailed him in the county courthouse at Lincoln. I drove over on a blizzardy day, snow chains rattling on the road. They've made a little museum with The Kid's letters in a glass case on the ground floor.

Most of them are to Governor Lew Wallace. The Kid had more complaints about his coming hanging than a housewife over the quality of a chuck roast. (Lincoln is so small now that the population doesn't show in an atlas. But the newspaper at Roswell told me by phone: "That's in the Sierra-Blanca. It's become a popular ski resort for folks from the Texas Panhandle. They get about 26,000 a year.")

Finally the Kid broke jail, shot two deputy sheriffs. And one night, Sheriff Pat Garrett killed him on the porch of Pete Maxwell's ranch house at the old Fort. He is buried in the cemetery.

There is a little board shack museum at the old cemetery. They sell children's bows and arrows, soft drinks and postcards of the grave.

The grave is out in back, in a weedy yard full of worn down stones, oil cans and junk. It is marked by a big white stone surrounded by high cyclone wire fencing.

Even so, the stone is badly chipped down.

The lady in the museum said she didn't know how the tourists get through the fence to chip at the stone. Chipping gravestones is a hard occupation. But tourists have chipped away three complete stones over Sam Bass. Three, including a full-size statue, over Wild Bill Hickok.

This is the second stone over Billy the Kid.

The stone says: "Tom O'Folliard, died December, 1880. Charlie Bowdre, died December, 1880. William Bonney, alias, Billy the Kid."

"Big Foot Tom" O'Folliard and Charlie Bowdre were killed when the Kid was first captured for the Brady killing.

At the top of the tombstone, it says: "PALS."

The lady in the museum lives next door. She said this was the second stone over the grave.

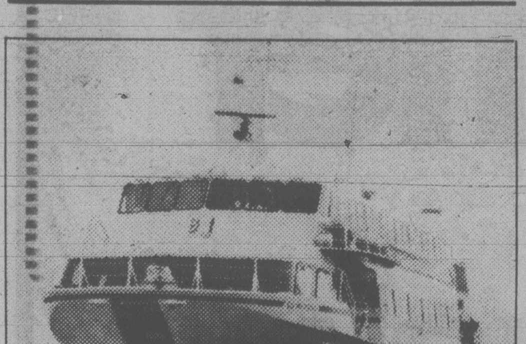
'This other'n was just chipped away to nothing. Some of the people in the valley got together and put up this one. I don't know how they get through that mesh fence and chip at it."

'You notice the footstone is gone on Billy's side?

'That footstone was bolted down to concrete. Two big iron bolts through it. The stone weighed 250 pounds.

'Well, one morning, I woke up and went out to look at Billy. That stone was gone! And there wasn't a dent in the fence!

'How they did that, I'll never know. Some tourist got that stone. But how, I'll never know. Anymore'n I can figure out why they like to chip at it."



IRELAND'S NATIONAL shipping line, B + I Line, launched its first high-speed jet-foil service Friday between Ireland and Britain. The $12 million, 260-passenger craft which will shuttle at 80 km/h between Dublin and Liverpool, is similar to the jetfoil coming into service between Seattle and Victoria May 16.

Summer flights to BRITAIN and EUROPE...

'WARDAIR CLASS'

A little Wardair Class goes a long way. So if you're planning a trip to Britain or Europe this summer, go with the airline that offers the kind of inflight service other airlines charge extra for.

We'll treat you to a full course steak dinner, served hot from the galley on china dinnerware. We'll cook your steak to your liking—rare, medium or well done; offer you a choice of imported wines with dinner and tempt you with our irresistible desserts, followed by liqueurs and coffee. And during the flight, the bar is open for drinks, beer, soft drinks, juice, coffee, tea or milk.

Wardair Class also means you'll be encouraged to get up and stretch your legs because we want you to explore the attractive interior of our spacious, wide-bodied aircraft—a Boeing 747 or a DC-10.

It's all part of Wardair Class service and it doesn't cost a penny extra.

Now you can fly to one city, return from another!

Dahab - quiet Sinai retreat

By WILLIAM CLAIBORNE

JERUSALEM — Anyone who claims to really know the vast expanses of the Sinai Peninsula is a liar or a fool, so multifarious are its rugged natural wonders spread over 3,700 square miles of barren desert and spectacular mountains.

But with some humility, I can say I know Dahab. I say it also with some certainty of not being challenged, since Dahab is a miniscule Bedouin village consisting of a few thatched huts, a lopsided shed that passes for a beer joint and some of the best shallow-reef snorkeling and deep-reef diving in the world.

When the madcap traffic of Tel Aviv brings me close to lunacy, or when my eyes begin to glaze over from the obtrusive pronouncements of the government in Jerusalem, it is time to head for Dahab for the cure that Bedouin tribesmen have taken for granted for thousands of years, and Israelis can take for granted until March, 1982, when this final slice of the Sinai that was captured during the Six-day War will revert to Egypt.

But until then, and until the Sinai coast along the Red Sea (Gulf of Aqaba) is reopened to tourism under the Egyptian flag, Dahab will remain my favorite little retreat from the real world.

Picture this: paddling about in magnificently clear turqouise water, gazing through a snorkle mask at literally thousands of multicolored fish of all shapes. In the background, on a deserted sandy beach ringed by towering palms, a lone herdsman arrives, accompanied by bleating sheep, restless goats and one serene-looking camel. The herdsman pauses long enough for a desultory look at the fiery sun rising over the distant Saudi Arabian horizon, and then resumes his hoofed parade, once again leaving the beach to you alone.

The place is Lighthouse Point, a presumptuous name, since the "lighthouse" is a small beacon on a rather rickety stand, and the caretakers frequently forget to turn it on.

Dahab, about 75 miles south along the coast from the Israeli port city of Eilat, has little to offer in the way of creature comforts. If you're up to roughing it, the Bedouin rent primitive, palm-branch huts at about $1 per night, and you can get cold beer and some Arab food at the local equivalent of a pub.

But drive south along the camel track for 5 minutes and you will appear at Dizahav, a lovely oasis (moshav) founded by Israeli settlers in 1971 and turned into a holiday village.

It's easy to stay at Dizahav, enjoying its pleasant rooms and driving off each day to Dahab and other even more remote coral reefs for snorkeling and diving. The Dizahav room rates include half-board (breakfast and either lunch or dinner, as desired).

Dizahav also has a wide, sandy beach shaded by palm trees, a typically Israeli kibbutz-type dining room with excellent food, a small and unpretentious disco-bar, and a well equipped diving shop with reasonably-priced snorkel and scuba gear for rent.

Flights from Jerusalem or Tel Aviv to Eilat on Arkia Airlines are $45 U.S. one way, and car rentals range from $16 U.S. per day, although there are buses that run to Dizhav and its sister moshav, Neviot, farther along the coast. Neviot also has an adjacent Bedouin village, Nuewiba, but the diving there doesn't match Dahab's.

For the tourist with a car, it's only an hour's drive or so to Ofira at the southern tip of the Sinai, and Sharm el Sheikh, the spectacular coral-reef bay.

At the adjacent Ras Muhammed Point, the snorkeling and diving are even better than at Dahab (although not nearly as secluded and serene), but it is in territory that was turned back to Egypt on Jan. 25, and there are still some bureaucratic problems getting across the interim internatonal boundary.

Recent visitors there, however, said they expected the red tape to be cleared away any day, and tourists with non-Israeli passports should be able to cross without too much difficulty. They suggest checking with the new Egyptian embassy in Tel Aviv.

Travel from Dizahav or Neviot to the ancient Santa Katarina Monastery has also been simplified. Tourists going by bus or command car over the kidney-jarring dirt road are allowed through in groups with a minimum of paperwork at the Egyptian crossing.

And for those travelers who begin to weary of all that desert-trekking, there is always Dahab to retreat to and relax in, in the solitude of the Sinai.

San Francisco as romantic as ever

By GUS STEVENS

SAN FRANCISCO — They say that San Francisco suffers from narcissism. If I were half so beautiful and exciting, so would I. You'd have to drag me away from the mirror.

For the first time in three or four years, I spent a day and an evening in The City. The place is more romantic and glittering than ever.

If traumas remain from the City Hall slayings and the divisiveness of the following court verdict, it is not apparent to the casual visitor. Of course, I did not trouble to inspect the broken glass and twisted grillwork at City Hall.

I am not sure why, but we flew into Oakland. Friends met us, and we immediately headed for the Bay Bridge.

It was warm and clear in the East Bay, as it often is, but as usual, the city on the other end of the bridge was playing hide-and-seek in the fog.

As we sped toward our mecca, I stared at the Transamerica pyramid.

Like so many others, I had at first thought the pointy skyscraper an assault to aesthetic principles.

Now I rather like it. Like good art, it gets better with exposure, and it has become almost as symbolic of the San Francisco skyline as the Golden Gate Bridge and Coit Tower.

We zipped past the indoor used-car lots of Van Ness Avenue and then west, through Japantown to Golden Gate Park.

There we stretched out on the lawn by a little lake, so that we could watch baby ducks and their parents paddle about while we ate cracked crab and drank chablis.

After lunch we went to the California Palace of the Legion of Honor, one of the West Coast's genuinely elegant buildings.

A long-playing glittering art show was winding up, but there still were crowded buses and long lines converging on the front door.

As we waited in line an old couple chatted with us. He was a Golden Bear from the University of California, Class of 1928. He said his class, observing the tradition of a 50th anniversary gift to the university, had come up with donations enough to buy additional bells for the Berkeley campanile.

The museum crowd was San Franciscan: young people in jeans and T-shirts, older ones in hats, Harris tweeds and flannels. Here and there a walking stick could be seen.

King Tut was in town, but it takes more than that exhibit to set San Francisco on its ear.

Later we went down to the Marina for a gin and tonic, with cheese. We watched joggers on shore and leaning sailboats on the darkening waters of the bay.

But this wasn't any bay. This was San Francisco. Which means that Alcatraz and Angel islands loomed in the near distance.

Along the marina, a Rolls slipped past us, a young man in a dark suit behind its right-hand wheel. A blonde leaned against his shoulder. They may have been F. Scott and Zelda, or perhaps Gatsby and his girl.

It was getting dark and very cold as a foggy wind whipped around our legs. We hurried to the car and drove downtown.

Dead ahead was that pyramid again, standing out all the way from its base to its point, like a golden Christmas tree.

All the way down to the bay, high-rises glittered like jewels.

At great expense, Market Street has had its face lifted. The once-dowdy produce district has been transformed into hotels, offices and apartments.

As we swung out on the Bay Bridge I looked down at the diminished Ferry Building, now surrounded by giants.

I stole a last look back at The City and the hair stood on my arms, as it always does. Then San Francisco vanished in the fog.

San Francisco's 8¼-mile Bay Bridge stretches out from the city's skyline

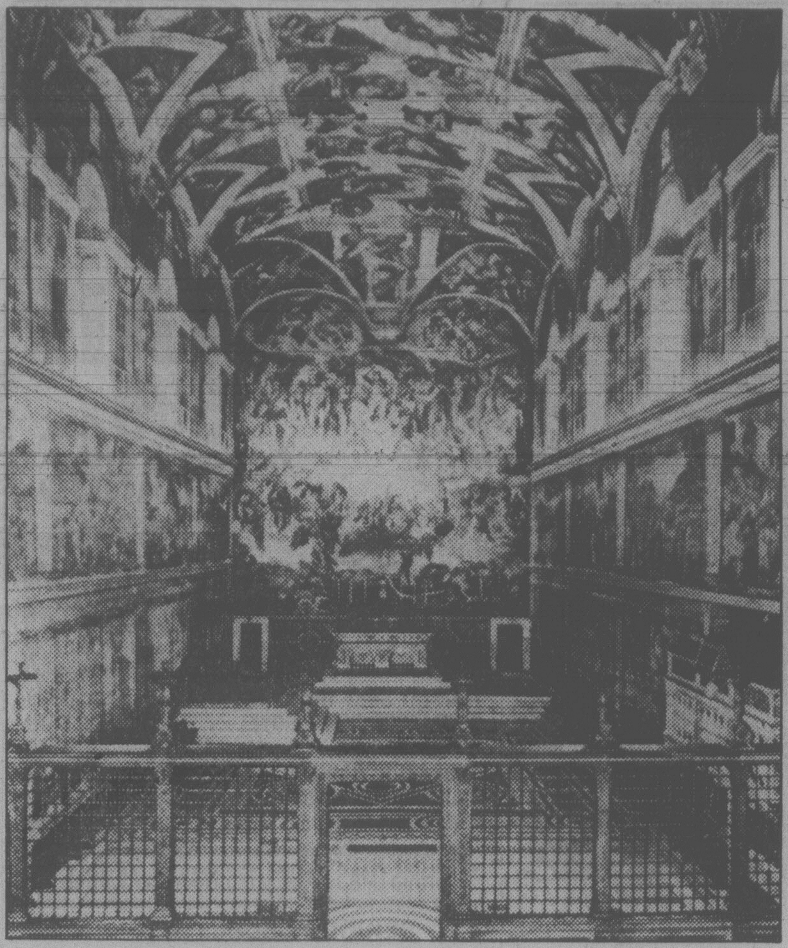
The Magnificent Adventure



The Sistine chapel in Rome with its Michelangelo frescoes

Tale of four cities: an art tour of Italy

By JAN JENNINGS

ROME — A return to Italy is like a breath of fresh air. A Renaissance all its own.

Art abounds. It's everywhere you look. Beauty, drama, poignancy, elegance, excitement. Basic respect for humanity. The heights to which man has, does and will aspire.

Recently, I retraced the art centers of this remarkably creative and productive country — small in size, gargantuan in inspiration.

My prime concern was to view the arts once again — perhaps to do some reassessing, certainly updating. But people come to this ancient peninsula for a myriad of reasons.

There are the wine connoisseurs, the macho chefs, the jet-setters, the travelling students. There are people who come to visit friends and relatives, and the dedicated patrons of the arts. Then there are the everyday folk who just come out of curiosity to explore another country.

In Rome, I overheard a senior citizen visiting from Florida: "But everything looks so old? Why don't they raze these ruins and build modern, useful structures?"

In Florence, a living art gallery of a city, a seemingly urbane gentleman visiting from New York was distressed that he had come all this way and a trip to the Uffizi Gallery was not included in his tour package.

"I hate to come all the way to Florence and not see any art," he pined.

Alas, his sensibilities were not geared to the affluence of outdoor sculpture in public places, of glorious fountains and of monuments scattered with purpose throughout Italy.

Whether visiting a museum, a gallery, a cathedral, of just taking a stroll down the streets, there is hardly a turn in Rome, Florence, Venice or Milan that may be taken without some confrontation with man's concern for the uplifting and the aesthetic in his environment.

Florence has its glorious moments. It also has its saddening moments.

And any trip to Florence should, indeed, include a generous time slot at the Uffizi. The gallery houses some of the cream of pictorial art of Renaissance Italy.

Art historians have written concerning the paintings in the Uffizi Collection: "Without them, history cannot be written."

The Uffizi is considered one of the first museums to create a more direct dialogue between man and art. Here, art was exhibited no longer just in religious and academic institutions. It became important just for its own aesthetic sake. Also for its recording of history.

Among other Florentine select highlights are the collections in the Pitti Palace. The Palatine Gallery has numerous works by Botticelli, Raphael, Titian, Ghirlandaio and the Gallery of the Academis houses Michelangelo's David. This monumental work, approximately two and one-half times life-size, attests to Michelangelo's belief that the male figure is among the most perfect, balanced and artistic creations.

It is heartening that this original work is among the best preserved in Florence, but it is disturbing that a copy of it, such as the one in Piazza della Signoria, near the Uffizi, is suffering the assault of time, climate and the elements, as are other artifacts in Florence. (The River Arno flooded sections of the city in 1966 causing untold damage.)

In Rome are the well preserved and awesome Vatican City and St. Peter's Cathedral.

The complex houses the Sistine Chapel with Michelangelo's frescoes representing the life of Moses and the life of Christ. Michelangelo's restored Pieta is pedestalled within the cathedral and may be viewed behind a transparent protective partition. The Vatican Picture Gallery shows works by Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael, Giotto, Bellini, Caravaggio, Fra Angelico.

Botticelli's La Primavera

An entire trip could be spent viewing the Vatican's treasures, but move onto another highlight of Rome: The celebrated Pantheon, erected in 27 B.C. is considered the most perfect of all classical monuments in Rome. The Pantheon serves as a mausoleum and among those buried there is Raphael, commemorated in a sculptural niche.

Perhaps the most famous fountain in Rome is Trevi Fountain. It is the facade of a large palace decorated with statues and bas-reliefs on heaps of rocks. The story goes that a toss of a coin into the fountain insures a return to the city. The sculptures of the fountain are of the Bernini school.

Even outside the city, the historical architecture, though tainted by time, is preserved in old villas. The exteriors remain testimony to the historic greatness of the empire. Interiors have been remodeled to serve as plush residences of the contemporary elite.

Rome is a difficult citadel to leave, but there is yet another treasury of Italian art, especially concentrated in the Academia Gallery of Venice.

The Academia housed the largest and most important collection of Venetian paintings from the 14th to the 18th centuries. It was constructed in 1807 by order of Napoleon. There are marvelous works depicting the beauty and charm of Venice by Canaletto and Guardi, as well as a wealth of works by Bellini, Veronese, Carpaccio, Giorgione, Tintoretto, Bassano, Tiepolo, Cima and others.

A stroll through Venice itself reveals dozens of tiny galleries peppered about, showing the works of contemporary Venetian artists. These range from the expected canal scenes in varying media to the more experimental works, many in super-realism and surrealism.

The last trip of the tour is Milan, a bustling industrial center.

After surveying museums, cathedrals and galleries in the first three cities, I must admit it takes a concentrated effort to get excited about another cathedral, museum or painting of Madonna and Child.

Fortunately, Milano has the pizzazz to stimulate that needed adrenalin once again.

A cathedral like no other cathedral yet visited, the Duomo in Milan is truly an architectural wonder, with work continuing on it constantly. Magnificent is not strong enough to describe the bold, ornate exterior.

Then there is La Scala, in comparison to the Duomo, a rather ordinary-looking structure. But inside, a museum houses memorabilia of the opera and famous opera stars, and with luck you may see and hear a rehearsal in progress.

Another thrill in this city is a visit to view the Last Supper (1495-1497) by Leonardo in the convent of Santa Maria delle Grazie. Over the years a number of artists have put their efforts to restoring this masterpiece.

Ancient aqueduct espresso secret

By PAUL HOFMANN

ROME — Some of the best espresso in the Eternal City and arguably in all of Italy — if not, as local coffee chauvinists assert, in the entire world — is being drunk around the Pantheon. Credit is due, at least in part, to a lieutenant of Emperor Augustus.

A man of humble origins and many talents, Marcus Vipsanius Agrippa won decisive battles for the Emperor, married his only daughter, Julia, and among other achievements built an aqueduct that is still in service, providing the water for the exceptional brew.

"You need, of course, high-grade beans, but the kind of water you use is essential for the quality of coffee," says Carlo Fiocchetto, whose shop near the ancient temple to all the gods sells 10,000 cups of espresso and cappuccino every day. "If you want to make good espresso in New York, take bottled Evian water. What comes out of your taps is too hard and is loaded with disinfectants. Most water in Rome too has a lot of calcium, but in this neighborhood here we are fortunate to have this soft water of marvelous quality."

Drinking powerful espresso or rich cappuccino is one of the joys of Italy, an easily renewable pleasure in which most people here indulge several times a day.

Puissant coffee is served in most of Rome's 3,000 espresso bars, even though most of them must make do with tap water from other sources than the ancient aqueduct that supplies the Pantheon area. Their espresso machines are fitted with filters and need frequent removal of calcium deposits.

Elsewhere in the country, Naples deserves special mention. One may walk at random into almost any espresso shop there and find remarkably good coffee. Again, that city's water is a prime reason; it accounts also, to a large measure, for the fame of Neapolitan spaghetti.

Statistically, Italians are by no means the world's most avid coffee drinkers. The per-capita consumption of Americans and some other peoples is much higher.

However, espresso is a fragrant package of mental lucidity and nervous energy that marks a high point in an average Italian's day, and it is at the center of a social rite as well. The beverage is most often drunk while one stands up against the chromium or marble counter in one of the innumerable espresso bars dotting every city and town.

Meet the Navy Show. Touring July 6-August 17

In honor of the Royal Canadian Navy's anniversary, and it's great contributions to our seafaring province, Nova Scotia is re-mounting the famous "Meet the Navy" Show. If you were around in the war years, you'll remember such hits and groups as "Women at War," "Rockettes & Wrens," "You'll Get Used to It." If you missed it then, don't miss it now! Alan Lund, original cast member, is directing this 1980 version. The show is on the road in Nova Scotia for six weeks this summer. Come to Nova Scotia and "Meet the Navy."

The Great Acadian Festival. July 9-August 24

In 1605, Port Royal on the Fundy Shore of Nova Scotia, was established as the first French settlement in North America. That's 375 years ago and its nothing more or less than the celebration of the birth of a nation. That's a great reason to have a party. Come and join with Acadians from Nova Scotia and everywhere else, in this super celebration. Come to Saulnierville, to Cheticamp, to Port Royal. Be apart of this exciting historical and cultural event. Eat rappie pie, toe-tap to Acadian music, dance a lively jig! It's a great big birthday party, and you are very welcome. It's another big event in Super Summer 80.

Super Summer 80 has all kinds of events and happenings everywhere in Nova Scotia. Come and join in the fun. What a super vacation for your super family.

Beauty and history abound in Ireland

By ALFRED JACOBY

DUBLIN — "Just be walking to the head of the street there," the hotel doorman replies when I ask the route to a church here. "Then turn to the right, then to the left around the square, about two blocks, turn right again and there's the church."

How long does it take? "It's but a brisk 10-minute walk."

Actually, it takes 45 minutes of walking, but "a brisk 10-minute walk" is a universal measure of time — regardless of the distance — in Ireland.

My wife and I soon discover that this is a land one may not absorb in, as it were, a brisk 10-minute walk. Anyone who presumes to become an expert in a week-long visit — even with lots of advance reading — will fail.

Rather, it's better to take the 45-minute walk, speaking both literally and figuratively, and enjoy the impressions on every hand.

Dublin is a city fortunate enough to have been missed by the Industrial Revolution, as many have pointed out. There are green squares here and there in the center of the city, many surrounded by Georgian buildings with their characteristic elaborate wooden doors and arched doorways.

An historical mood abounds. It is impossible, for example, to walk along Upper O'Connell Street, past the General Post Office, without remembering the 1916 Easter Uprising. It is impossible, too, to read the monuments recalling the heroic names of the time without hearing, in the inner recesses of one's mind, the sad lament of Irish revolutionaries, "Oh, Paddy dear, and did you hear, the news that's going around? The Shamrock is by law forbid to grow on Irish ground!"

On a late-Sunday afternoon in Dublin gray and misty, a 6-foot-tall white-haired woman is talking to a jeering crowd about the Church and the Virgin Mary. She seems even taller because she wears a tartan cape and her voice, though commanding, is never strident.

"Through the Holy Mother," she says, "you must accept Jesus Christ. You must not waste your life in carousing, in drinking, in a sinful life."

A carouser, his face flushed with drink and the chill, hands deep in his jacket pockets, works his way through the crowd, shouting, "And what do the likes of you know of sin? Why not let me tell about sin?

Hecklers are obviously nothing new for the woman. Her voice never falters, flowing over the street roustabouts like a roll of drums over a violin. When she stops to listen, head cocked, a rosary working in her fingers, arm stretched out where all can see, I have no doubt who will win the contest of beliefs.

Driving on Irish roads is casual, at best. Driving out to visit fishing villages on the Ring of Kerry in southwestern Ireland one morning, we come around a blind curve on a steep hill overlooking green hills and a stream. In the foreground, off the road at a view turnout, is a bright green-and-red Gypsy wagon. Nearby, a herd of long-haired goats grazes on the heavy grass.

"It's all a stage set," I think. "Someone is running ahead and painting Irish scenes for tourists."

Winners to dance on Sunday

By AUDREY JOHNSON

More than 20 winning entries were selected by adjudicator Jean McKenzie to appear at the Studio Dance honors performance Sunday at McPherson Playhouse.

The program, which begins at 7 p.m., will include ballet, tap, jazz, national and character dances as well as song-and-dance numbers from 10 Victoria and up-island studios.

Among group numbers will be two outstanding presentations from the week's session: The Pied Piper, a character ballet by students of the Wendy Marlow School of Dance, and a modern ballet by Lauren McLeod, winner of the under 17 young choreographers class, who received the festival's top mark to date, 92.

From Avril Johns' studio there will be two group numbers — A Summer Afternoon in the Hebrides, and a classical ballet group for dancers 11 and under. Pacific Dance Centre will present The Rose Fairies and there will be a pointe group from Wendy Marlow.

National dances include Happy Little Peasants from the Wynne Shaw Studio and Dancing in the Heather from the Joslynn McDougall School of Highland Dancing. Song-and-dance performances are Charlie Brown (Theatrical Arts Studio) and Canadian Sweethearts (Mary Lee Studio).

Tap group numbers are Hot Feet (Sherry Black) and Tiptoe Through the Tulips (Royal Oak).

Solos and pas de deux in a range of styles from ballet to jazz, will be performed by outstanding dancers, including Kim Tuson, Dana Dyck, Kim Martin, Eugenie Ngai, Carolyn Crampton, Jodi Sing, Kim Martin, Beth Pulton, Rhonda Milller, Teresa Young, Jennifer Thompson, Karen Pantusso, Polly Green and Marina Kasapi.

The Festival's fine four-day speech session, its ranks swelled and enhanced by a talented invasion from a Port Alberni studio, concluded with an honor performance, Thursday.

Adjudicator Dr. Leona Paterson praised the general standard of work, saying there was continual evidence of excellent training. Delightful things had happened at all age levels and in every category, she said.

The honors program reflected her comments, covering prose, poetry, drama and public speaking, with an opening by the very young and appealing St.Patrick's School speech choir and including senior citizen Sheila Reardon as an excellent raconteur in a humorous retelling of the hare-and-tortoise fable.

Dr. Paterson presented several awards during the evening: Celeste Hambleton received the Marion J. Ord Memorial Award for junior speech; Sandra Foweraker, an anonymous award and the Community Arts Council Award; the open class award was won by Jean Oxby and the Helen Smith Award for a boy under 21 with the highest aggregate marks, by David Wingrove. Hilary Stark won the Audrey Johnson Award.

Also participating in the program were Mark Murr, Jennifer Lindsay, Celeste Hambleton, Sara Olafson, Kylie Sutton, Kirsten Scoffield, Melissa Anderson, David Jarvis and Craig Belton, Richard Thompson, Sandra Foweraker, Debbie Unger, Jean Oxby, Hilary Stark and David Wingrove.

The first of two great choral evenings at St.John's Anglican Church, Friday, delighted adjudicator David Astor. From the enchanting Dokken Family ensemble to the two senior citizen choirs - the Hamptons and the Silver Threads Songmen — the evening was a high class mini-festival for choral music lovers.

The second of the two evenings is tonight at St.John's with a promising program that includes Victoria Boys Choir, St.Matthias Junior and Primary Choir, St.Mary's Church Boys Choir and the excellent Cowichan Chorale.

And for contrast the ever popular barbershop of the Sweet Adelines and Village Squires.

Full comment on the two evenings will follow in the next Times festival report, Monday.

Despite a mini-heatwave, the Crystal's for the birds

By BRENDA DALGLISH

The birds in the newly renovated Crystal Garden are so contented, says aviary manager Don Adams, that two pairs of parrots have begun to nest.

But in other areas of the Crystal, like any new building, working out the bugs is taking a bit of time.

The only real problem — it involves the glass roof — is one that was anticipated when the renovation was first contemplated.

The roof, the garden's most distinctive feature, is a source of heating and ventilation problems.

The building is ventilated by means of panels in the roof which open automatically when a thermometer registers a set temperature.

This confuses the thermometer which controls the ventilation system.

Ken Patton, of the Provincial Capital Commission, says the system just requires some fine tuning so that when the ballroom adjoining the garden area is in use, the temperature is more suitable for humans than plants.

Architect David Hambleton, who developed the new design for the Crystal, said the building has always had ventilation problems and when the renovation design was developed, everyone concerned recognized the result would be a compromise.

An air conditioning system for the building was ruled out because of cost and the difficulty of camouflaging necessary duct work.

But several options have been considered for the building if the glass roof continues to create heating and ventilation problems.

The use of redwood slat blinds placed on the outside of the building which could be unrolled to shade the roof from intense sun is one possible solution, he said.

A system of various kinds of indoor blinds is another consideration.

A more traditional method, which was used on the old Crystal roof, is to paint the roof each year with an opaque covering which would add extra screening.

Hambleton said a decision was made to not include any of these alternatives in the original renovation in the hope that no problems would occur.

A caulking problem in the roof's glass panels has kept the glass work sub-contractor busy replacing broken panels, said a spokesman for the contractor Cana Construction Company.

But the cause of that problem has been solved and no further glass problems are anticipated.

Work is still going on in the building, including construction of a back-up greenhouse where plants will be readied for placement in the garden.

The facility's restaurant, F. M. Rattenbury's, is scheduled to open in May.

City approves harbor plan

The long term development plan for the Songhees reserve on the west side of the harbor has been approved in principle by city council, after several aldermen traded sharp remarks about knockers and doers.

Ald. Bob Wright, who steered the plan to completion during the last three months, was amiably critical of those who had reservations about the plan.

"In any society there are doers and there are knockers," he said, referring to Ald. Robin Blencoe's earlier concerns about the public getting a chance to review the plan.

Wright said it is a 20-year plan and there will be plenty of time for public input, "lots of time for the knockers."

Ald. Gretchen Brewin needled Wright a bit as well when she said she was glad to see that council had finally been given the plan, after it had appeared in the newspapers.

She also made it clear that approval in principle did not mean approval of every detail that may come up in the next 20 years. She was voting for it only to get the plan into the public forum for discussion.

Although the city prepared the plan, most of the land in the Songhees reserve, and almost all the property on the southern half which is to be residential development, is owned by the provincial government.

Several previous plans for the blighted industrial area have been drafted in the past and produced nothing. This latest one was initiated when the province told the city it was planning to sell the land. Now it is covered by leases of varying terms.

The key to the plan is relocating the oil tank farms. The Songhees plan suggests burying them on five acres of land fill next to Lime Bay and covering the site with a park. On either side would be low rise apartments.

GREATER VICTORIA SCHOOL DISTRICT

FRENCH IMMERSION — POSSIBLE ESTABLISHMENT OF FURTHER IMMERSION SCHOOL SURVEY OF PARENT INTEREST

The Greater Victoria School Board wishes to determine the degree of parent interest in enrolling their children in a further French Immersion Kindergarten which might be offered in another school in the District in September, 1980, subject to there being sufficient parent requests.

A location could not be decided until the addresses of interested parents are known, and the choice would also be influenced by availability of space; however, every effort would be made to place the program as near as possible to the location of the greatest parent demand. TRANSPORTATION OF CHILDREN TO ATTEND THE PROGRAM WOULD BE THE RESPONSIBILITY OF PARENTS.

Immersion survey forms are being sent directly to those parents who requested this on their Basic French Survey return in March, 1980. If you did not receive a Basic French Survey form (this was not distributed through schools already having a Basic French programme), OR if you did not indicate on the Basic French Survey that you wished to receive an Immersion Survey form, AND you wish to enrol your child in an Immersion Kindergarten if a further one is established, please complete the coupon below and return to the Curriculum Co-ordinator (French), Greater Victoria School Board, P.O. Box 700, 3128 Foul Bay Road Victoria, B.C. V8W 2R1, by May 2, 1980.

Parents whose children are already enrolled for Immersion Kindergarten in September, 1980, at Campus View, Quadra or Willows schools, should not complete this coupon.

SURVEY OF PARENT INTEREST IN FRENCH IMMERSION KINDERGARTEN, 1980

I would be interested in enrolling my child(ren) shown below in a French Immersion Kindergarten if one were established in September, 1980:

ROGER ALBERT GALLANT
IVAN JOSEPH GALLANT
DAWN TERESA GALLANT
NOTICE OF HEARING

TO: DONALD LEO GALLANT. Take notice that on the 8th day of MAY, 1980, at 9:30 o'clock in the forenoon, a hearing will take place at the Provincial Court, at 2020 CAMERON ST., VICTORIA, British Columbia, to determine whether:

The child/ren Birthdate
ROGER ALBERT GALLANT MARCH 21, 1977
IVAN JOSEPH GALLANT JANUARY 10, 1976
DAWN TERESA GALLANT NOVEMBER 22, 1974

are in need of protection within the meaning of Section 7, subsection 1, clause(s), (k) "....whose parent or parents are unfit, unable, or unwilling to care properly for him", of the Protection of Children Act.

And further take notice that if the Judge finds the said CHILDREN ARE in need of protection he may make an order under Section 8(9) (a):

(i) That the child be returned to his parent or other person having actual custody at the time of apprehension subject to inspection and supervision by the Superintendent for a period not exceeding twelve months; or

(ii) That the child be committed temporarily to the care and custody of the Superintendent for a period not exceeding twelve months as in the circumstances of the case he considers advisable; or

(iii) Subject as hereinafter provided, that the child be committed permanently to the care and custody of the Superintendent.

And further take notice that at this hearing the Superintendent will recommend that an order be made under Section 8(9) (a) ii for a period not exceeding twelve months.

And further take notice that if an order is made for the temporary committal of the child/ren to the care and custody of the Superintendent, the Judge may make an order that you pay maintenance as provided under Section 34a(2) of the Act.

PLEASE BE ADVISED THAT:

(a) you are requested to be present at the hearing

(b) you have the right to be represented by legal counsel

(c) an order may be made in your absence

(d) you have the right to appeal any order within 30 days from the date the Order is made.

DATED at VICTORIA, British Columbia, this 16th day of APRIL 1980.

To: Janice Brewer

Take notice that on the 22nd day of May, 1980, at 9:30 o'clock in the forenoon, a Hearing will take place at the Provincial Court at 2020 Cameron Street, Victoria, British Columbia, to determine whether the child, Shawna Lynne Brewer, birthdate 20.09.76, is in need of protection within the meaning of Section 7, subsection 1, clause (k), "whose home by reason of neglect, cruelty or depravity is an unfit place for the child, or who has no proper guardianship, or whose parent or parents are unfit, unable or unwilling to care properly for him.", and clause (f) "who has been deserted by her parent.", of the Protection of Children's Act.

And further take notice that at this Hearing the Superintendent will recommend that the child be committed temporarily to the care and custody of the Superintendent for a period not exceeding twelve months.

You are requested to be present at the Hearing. You have the right to be represented by legal counsel. An Order may be made in your absence. You have the right to appeal any order within 30 days from the date the Order is made.

309 IN MEMORIAM

GODFREY - In loving memory of my Husband, Bob.
"He has put on invisibility.
Dear Lord, I cannot see-
But his I know, although the road ascends,
And passes from my sight,
That there will be no night;
That You will take him gently by the hand and lead him on.
Along the road of Life that never ends,
And he will find it is not death but dawn.
I do not doubt that You are there as here,
And you will hold him dear."
Glad Godfrey

PIERCY - George W. Piercy passed away April 23, 1978. "His word was his bond"
Fondly remembered and deeply missed by all his family and friends.

309 IN MEMORIAM

McCLYMONT - In loving memory of Norma, a beloved wife and mother, who passed away April 25/79, and is sadly missed by all.

REID — In loving memory of our dear husband, father and grandfather George, who left us on April 26, 1978.
Softly the leaves of memory fall
Gently we gather and treasure them all.
Unseen, unheard, you're always near
So loved, so missed, so very dear.
—Loving wife, Muriel, children and grandchildren.

The Lord is my Shepherd
I shall not want
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures
He restoreth my soul
He leadeth me in the path of righteousness for his name sake
Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death
I will fear no evil
For thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies
Thou anointest my head with oil
My cup runneth over
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the House of the Lord forever.

Grain terminal cash to flow?

EDMONTON (CP) — Ottawa appears to be reassessing its previous stand that Western farmers must pay federal costs to develop the Prince Rupert terminal, says Michael Thompson of Vancouver, chief project officer of Prince Rupert Grain.

He said Friday there are indications Ottawa will honor an agreement negotiated by the previous Progressive Conservative government under which Ottawa would pay up to $29 million of preparation costs estimated at $42.5 million.

Federal Transport Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said last month Ottawa was reconsidering the agreement, throwing the future of the project in doubt. The four Western premiers, at their annual conference in Lethbridge earlier this week, called on the Liberal government to honor the agreement.

Thompson said Pepin now has told him that Ottawa no longer insists on recovering its costs from the Prairie wheat pools and private grain companies making up the grain consortium.

Members of the consortium and federal officials will meet in Vancouver Thursday, he said. If all goes well, Thompson said, the consortium hopes to conclude an agreement with Ottawa before May 15.

THE DAILY COLONIST AND VICTORIA TIMES

Those little green men can't speak Russian!

MOSCOW (UPI) — After more than a decade of listening for radio signals from the stars, Soviet scientists conclude there probably are no outer space civilizations, the Tass news agency reported Friday.

Soviet scientists set up their first listening post in 1969 in an attempt to snag a few stray radio signals.

Instead of singling out lone stars for prolonged monitoring, Tass said, the Soviet system focused on the entire celestial hemisphere during each 24-hour scanning period:

"Such a system should have inevitably recorded signals of superpowerful extra-terrestrial civilizations."

Tass said Soviet scientists writing in a recent issue of the magazine Za Rabezhom felt the fruitless searches indicated there are no "supercivilizations" and probably not even any primitive ones.

They said advanced civilizations would have to have emerged if there were any civilized beings at all.

In 1974, U.S. scientists decided not to wait for a signal from outer space and sent their own intergalactic greeting card: a signal from a radiotelescope in Puerto Rico to a cluster of 300,000 stars near the Milky Way.

Dr. N.S. Kardashev, a Soviet scientist also involved in the search for life in outer space, says his country will soon begin in earnest to contact distant stars.

But he notes that if earthlings send a signal out, there is no assurance anyone out there is pointing a receiver in our direction. And besides, it would take 60,000 years to get a reply.

"That is no way to have a discusion," he said.

Crash scene hints 727 exploded in air

SANTA CRUZ DE TENERIFE (CP) — Investigators today recovered the flight recorder of a British airliner which crashed on a volcanic Tenerife hillside, killing all 146 people on board, official sources said.

The recorder should help establish why the Dan Air Boeing 727 hit the heavily wooded ridge while coming in to land at Los Rodeos Airport on Friday.

Rescue workers searching for bodies from the air disaster speculated today the jetliner may have exploded in the air.

The Dan Air charter flying vacationers in from Manchester, Eng., lost radio contact during its landing approach Friday.

The wreckage was located several hours later in wooded terrain about 25 kilometres south of Los Rodeos Airport, scene three years ago of the world's worst commercial air disaster.

Rescuers working into the night in dense fog with floodlights and generators recovered 30 charred bodies and took them to a funeral chapel set up in an army barracks. Police cordoned off the area after the search was suspended until daylight.

In London, a Dan Air spokesman said the plane was carrying 138 passengers, three of them infants, and eight crew members.

Spanish transport ministry flew here early today and will be joined later by British officials.

Volcanic action now in hearts of matrons

SPIRIT LAKE, Wash. (AP) — Harry Truman is a stubborn man who says his new-found fame is "a bunch of hooey." But to some women, Truman's refusal to leave his lodge near rumbling Mount St. Helens is mighty attractive.

Truman's decision to stick it out as the volcano belches and bubbles have brought him hundreds of letters, including at least three marriage proposals.

One 67-year-old widow wrote that she was still "full of life, loved thrills and excitement" and wanted to see his lake.

"Hell, I wrote back fast and told her to stay put — this was no place for a woman her age," said Truman, who admits being older than 80.

People in Mexico and Canada have invited Truman to visit them if the mountain gets too hot. But what the letters from children are the only ones Truman really prizes.

He reads these letters over and over:

"When it comes to kids, I'm just a sentimental old fool.

"When you live through so many generations, you start to wonder what's ahead for them."

Pan Am loss takes off

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Jolted by skyrocketing fuel prices, Pan American World Airways reported Friday a $74.9-million loss for the first quarter of 1980 despite higher revenues.

Pan Am's loss, equal to $1.05 a share, was up sharply from its $8.9-million or 17 cent a share loss recorded in the same period a year ago.

Pan Am blamed the deficit on a 103-per-cent rise in fuel costs and the inability to increase fares. The airline noted that costs surged despite a 1.4-per-cent drop in fuel consumption.

Revenues, bolstered by results of newly acquired National Airlines, climbed 60.3 per cent to $800.6 million from $499.4 million last year.

RISING HOME HEATING COSTS CAN BE BEATEN!!!

FIGHT BACK NOW!

Good news for homeowners if your home was built before 1961

If your home was built before January 1, 1961, the Federal Government will pay 100% of the cost of insulation materials up to a maximum of $350. and one third of the cost of labor up to a value of $150. That makes the total grant (not a loan) available $500. Insulation used in attics, walls, crawl spaces and basements all qualify for the grant. Do it now . . . more than $28,000,000 has already been given to Canadian homeowners under the C.H.I.P. program. Therm-attic blown cellulose insulation is manufactured and installed in your home to exacting standards set by C.M.H.C. for your safety and comfort. Our expert crews can top up the existing insulation in your walls and attic in a few short hours, making your home warmer in winter and cooler in summer. FOR PROFESSIONAL ADVICE AND MORE INFORMATION ABOUT THE $500. YOU NEVER HAVE TO PAY BACK . . . PHONE US TODAY.

Hostages split to foil rescue

Times News Services

The American hostages have been moved from the U.S. embassy in Tehran to various places around the Iranian capital and will be scattered to other parts of the country to foil any new U.S. attempt to rescue them, the Islamic militants occupying the embassy said today.

President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr said at a news conference later that this will also prevent student action against the hostages which the government does not want. He was referring to possible reaction following American efforts to rescue the captives.

Bani-Sadr also said Iran will call for an extradordinary meeting of non-aligned countries to deal with the latest U.S. measures against this country, including the abortive hostage rescue mission.

But Iran would not welcome any Soviet intervention if Iran country were attacked by another country, he added.

Iran had unilaterally cancelled an agreement with the Soviet Union which would have allowed the Soviets to intervene in Iran if another state invaded: "We don't want Soviet intervention even on our behalf — that will be considered aggression."

And he said the bodies of U.S. servicemen killed in this week's commando raid on Iran — and recovered by the Iranians from the charred wreckage of a U.S. C-130 transport plane and helicopter, which collided in the Iranian desert — would be returned to the U.S. However, there were conflicting reports as to how many American corpses had been located.

In related developments:

— A professional telephone poll conducted Friday indicated that 70 per cent of Americans approve of the raid and think further military action should be tried again to free the hostages.

— UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim personally pleaded with the U.S. and Iran Friday for reason and restraint, and urged them to revive immediately negotiations on a peaceful settlement of the hostage crisis.

— The Iranian National Mobilization Board was reported to have taken preliminary steps towards mobilization of Iran's 20 million-man army.

The militant students said the hostages have been sent to several places in Tehran and will be taken to unidentified Iranian cities where they will be in the hands of the Iranian people there.

The move would seem to take the hostages out of the direct control of the militants occupying the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

The Moslem militants seized the 50 Americans at the embassy 175 days ago. Three other Americans have been held at the foreign ministry.

Had the U.S. raid succeeded, the hostages were to have been flown out of Iran. But the operation foundered when some of the U.S. aircraft developed faults at the operational base in Iran's eastern Kavir-e-Lut desert. Five U.S. servicemen were injured, in addition to the eight killed.

The militants said there were links between the rescue forces and Iranian "mercenaries" in Tehran, and that this information has been handed over to revolutionary leader Ayatollah Khomeini.

Claiming the U.S. operation had a wider purpose than simply the release of the hostages, the militants called for increased security at Khomeini's residence, at radio and television headquarters and at

GM plans 18,000 layoffs

DETROIT (UPI) — General Motors Corp. plans to eliminate 18,000 workers around the world from its payroll in the No. 1 automaker's first major white collar employee cutback of the current recession.

With production plunging toward recession levels, long-term layoffs of production workers in the battered U.S. auto industry are approaching 180,000.

Indefinite layoffs now stand at 179,850, up from 169,450 last week and higher than a previous peak of 176,800 reached late in February.

In addition, Ford Motor Co. and GM plan to temporarily idle another 30,500 workers next week and suspend production at 13 car and truck operations. GM will have 90,300 U.S. hourly production workers on open-ended layoff.

GM said Friday it expects to reduce its staff of 180,000 salaried workers by 10 per cent as part of cost-cutting program.

Ford and Chrysler took similar steps recently, with Chrysler announcing a 20 per cent reduction in its already depleted white collar work force. Ford has taken steps to trim North American salaried employment by 18 per cent.

GM could not provide a breakdown of where the cutbacks would occur or when.

Beach patrol debut score: 355 bottles and 14 minors

By DEREK SIDENIUS

Saanich police began their crackdown on beach parties in earnest Friday night.

The 10-member beach patrol was out for the first time and used the RCMP helicopter to spot large fires in parks and beaches off the beaten track.

A spokesman said officers were kept busy but at least had the manpower to contend with the problems.

The beach patrol broke up numerous parties, seized 355 bottles of beer, 104 ounces of liquor and 156 ounces of wine and charged 14 minors with being in possession of liquor.

They also set up patrols at liquor outlets and turned away scores of would-be shoppers.

One officer said he intercepted 28 minors trying to make purchases and sent them packing.

Two youths were detained in police cells overnight for being drunk and officers charged two other persons with impaired driving.

In Victoria, rowdyism was rampant.

"It was just one damn fight after another — we were chasing and fighting, fighting and chasing," a weary officer said this morning.

The tally: 14 youths in custody for being drunk in a public place and breach of peace.

All were released when they sobered up. In addition, two juveniles were charged with mischief for jumping on a car and causing about $400 damage.

The spokesman said officers never stopped running from one end of the city to the other — breaking up at least six rowdy house parties, two beach parties and a couple of fights that erupted on downtown streets.

One on Broad Street involved about 60 youths but the crowd dispersed when police arrived.

Another, at Douglas and Fisgard resulted in a 19-year-old youth getting slashed across the forehead.

The police spokesman said the unidentified youth stumbled into the police station and "bled all over our floor . . . we had to use a mop to clean it up."

The wounded youth was taken to Victoria General Hospital where he was treated and released. An investigation is continuing.

The situation was the same in Oak Bay and Esquimalt.

"It was just crazy, like Halloween," said an officer in normally quiet Oak Bay.

He said officers had their hands full dispersing youths on beaches and breaking up one particularly noisy house party.

Two youths spent the night in police cells for being drunk and a third was charged with possession of marijuana.

Esquimalt police were kept busy handling numerous domestic complaints and reports of loitering, wilful damage and drunkeness. Two drunks were held in police cells overnight.

Colwood RCMP had what one officer described as a normal Friday night.

He said the beaches were well patrolled and officers encountered no problems. There were no noisy house parties as well.

His arrest brought the police officers their main source of entertainment for the night.

The youth jumped into the lagoon to get away from two arresting officers. As several other officers sat on a hill overlooking the scene, the two officers, their flashlights bobbing in the darkness, chased the youth up and down the shoreline.

The youth kept swimming from one sandbar to another, escaping just as the frustrated officers were ready to pounce.

Finally the officers gave up but some time later they spotted the bedraggled youth staggering up the road.

"It was almost like a full moon," the spokesman said.

Full moon isn't until next Wednesday.

Saanich police fire most

Saanich police discharge firearms in the line of duty more often than any other municipal police force in the province, statistics released by the B.C. Police Commission indicate.

Saanich officers fired 16 shots in 1978 and 12 shots in 1979. By comparison the Vancouver City force, which is eight times larger, recorded 11 and eight shots respectively.

Members of the Victoria force, the province's second largest municipal force, fired two shots in 1978 and three the following year.

The only force that fired more shots than Saanich, which has 115 officers, was the RCMP, which has 3,800 officers stationed in B.C.

The RCMP totals were 26 for 1978 and 63 for 1979.

Saanich deputy police chief Rick Avison refused Friday to give details on the shooting incidents.

He said every time a shot is fired in the line of duty the matter is thoroughly investigated by senior officers and that should be enough to satisfy public curiosity.

"I'm not concerned how many shots are fired in Vancouver, Delta or Matsqui. If shots are fired and there's a good reason for it — and as long as it is reported — there is no need to go into it further."

He said comparisons with other forces are unfair.

"All you're trying to do is sensationalize and show there are more shots fired in Saanich than anywhere else.

Probe condemns Dr. Pickup

VANCOUVER (CP) — Remote Alert Bay's lone physician is an alcoholic, his patients are over-treated, the hospital board has not acted responsibly and the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons overprotects its members.

Also, at least two patients other than Renee Smith, have died at St. George's Hospital because of Dr. Jack Pickup's errors in judgment or neglect.

These sweeping condemnations are contained in the report of a one-man federal inquiry into health services in Alert Bay, an isolated, predominantly native Indian community, on an island off the northeastern tip of Vancouver Island.

The report, by Dr. Gary Goldthorpe of Sioux Lookout, Ont., was released Friday by Bill Cranmer, spokesman for the Nimpkish Indian band, who said it confirms what Indians have been saying for the past two years concerning the inadequacy of their health care.

Goldthorpe was selected by the band and appointed by then-federal Health Minister David Crombie to conduct the review after an inquest jury decided Pickup was negligent in the death of Renee Smith, the 11-year-old Indian girl who died of a ruptured appendix.

Pickup later was cleared by the B.C. College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Problems with health services at Alert Bay were further highlighted in January with the suicide of a man who had been impersonating a doctor in the community since November, 1979.

Robert Enrique Trujillo, 41, slashed his throat in the Port Hardy jail where he was being held after his masquerade as Dr. Robert Rifleman was discovered.

Goldthorpe said that 56 per cent of Alert Bay Indians die before the age of 40, and in Alert Bay an Indian stands a 25-per-cent greater chance of dying within the next year than does an Indian elsewhere in Canada.

The report also states that:

—Pickup is an alcoholic who needs treatment and who has been drunk many times while performing as

The provincial government has resisted the temptation to get involved in the aftermath of that tragic farce in Iran.

Sources say Deputy Premier Grace McCarthy was agitating for the government to send a message of condolence to the Americans for the failure of their hostage rescue mission. For a change, Grace didn't get her own way.

He appears to be permanently glued to the legislative hot seat, target of a barrage of bellyaching. The technique would be familiar to students of brainwashing.

The legislature has spent 44 hours on the premier's estimates so far and the opposition shows no sign of winding down their talkathon.

The debate has been tedious, feeble, irritating, shallow and witless. The overall effect is to numb the mind and glaze the eyeballs.

It has reached the point where the merest mention of a Dirty Trick or the mildest accusation of political arrogance is enough to cause severe depression, headaches and nausea among hardened reporters. Nosebleeds are common among unsuspecting tourists who drop in to catch half an hour of the action.

The NDP accuses Premier Bill of refusing to answer questions. The premier accuses the opposition of negativeism. Don Phillips yells himself red in the face on behalf of Social Credit. Graham Lea has a well-controlled spasm on behalf of the NDP.

Round and round, on and on. A clear case of malice in wonderland.

The honorable members, however, are missing an essential point — everybody else has lost interest.

No one is making Brownie points with the voters because the voters are no longer listening.

Hello in there, can you hear me? You can come out now. Everyone else has gone home.

Good news for all we little fellows here in the boonies.

The big boys from Ottawa are coming out to play. They'll hold our hands, check our bank accounts and tuck us into our teeny cots for another four years.

The ritual act of condescension takes place May 5 when 10 federal cabinet ministers visit Victoria for a day of discussions with their counterparts in the provincial cabinet.

Senator Ray Perrault, making the announcement at a press conference Friday, called it "part of a determined effort by the federal government to stay in touch with western Canada."

He didn't take kindly to the suggestion that we should consider the visit a cheap afterthought to the B.C. Liberal convention, which winds up the day before.

The premier, who joined the senator in making the announcement, deplored the suggestion that the whole thing is another Trudeau government exercise in public relations. Where was his much-publicized anger at federal neglect of the west?

Intergovernmental Relations Minister Garde Gardom, also present for the press conference, wouldn't say for sure whether the legislature would have to adjourn for the day to free the provincial ministers for their jolly meetings. He didn't rule it out.

Traditions, like fruit trees, can stand a little pruning now and then. Such is the case with that grand old tradition of the legislature, the introduction of guests in the public galleries.

Members spend between 10 and 20 minutes at the start of every sitting, making long-winded introductions of relatives, friends, constituents, girl guides, school groups and — very rarely — prominent visitors. Each introduction is dutifully applauded.

But things are getting worse. Members have taken to interrupting the debate to make introductions they forgot to make earlier.

Before this session ends — and it should be a record-breaker — the MLAs will have spent the equivalent of two full sitting weeks listening to each other make inane introductions and thumping their desks.

Time to cut that tradition back before it takes over completely and members find themselves interrupting introductions to squeeze in a little business.

Chinatown fund drive enters second phase

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Victoria's Chinese community has raised more than $30,000 for its landmark gateway to Chinatown and is now appealing to corporations and individuals for a matching amount.

Companies which give $500 or more and individuals who donate $100 — all deductible from income tax — will have their names on a bronze plaque to be attached to the traditional Chinese-style archway, Dean Strongitharme said Friday.

The former city planner, who has remained chairman of the co-ordinating committee supervising the revitalization of Chinatown, is appealing to all sectors of the non-Chinese community for support.

There will also be a time capsule to be sealed into the base of the gate when construction starts.

Strongitharme says that tentative plans are for a a scroll of names to be buried with the usual artifacts which go into such a time capsule.

Although details have yet to be worked out, Victorians may be able to sign the parchment scroll in return for a $2 donation to the gateway fund.

Already, about $10,000 has been raised in corporate donations.

The most recent were a $5,000 gift from AirWest Airlines and $500 from Buckerfield's, a company which as been located at the edge of Chinatown for many years.

All donations to the Chinatown Gateway Fund should be sent to city hall.

Strongitharme said in an interview that Mickey Lam, a city hall planning staffer, and others are working on the design details of the gateway.

It is to be symbolic of several things — a gateway to the Orient, a symbol of good relations between the Chinese and other Victorians and a commemoration of the rejuvenation of Chinatown.

The committee wants it to be as authentic as possible, including the carved dragons to be mounted above the street, but it also must meet a budget of about $100,000.

The original estimate last year was $96,000 with a proposal to ask the provincial heritage trust for half the amount to match what the community raises.

Under the $1 million clean-up of Fisgard Street between Government and Store, old brick buildings are being cleaned and painted, telephone and power lines are going underground and wider, decorative sidewalks are being built.

Petition launched against link to mainland proposal

By AB KENT

Claudia Donato describes herself as an irate citizen who doesn't like the idea of a fixed link between Vancouver Island and the mainland.

So she's getting up her own petition seeking public support from committed islanders who like Vancouver Island and the Gulf Islands the way they are.

She said arrangements for distributing the petition will be made within a day or so.

"We all enjoy the (Vancouver) island for what it is," she said Friday after seeing former cabinet minister Sam Bawlf's telephone survey which shows 72 per cent of respondents favor a bridge.

"What really got me going was the day they published the map showing all those lines crossing over the Gulf Islands."

Donato said she finds it curious the Islands Trust had neither discussed the proposal nor taken any action, even though the security of the islands seems threatened.

A spokesman for the trust said the idea of a link to the mainland will be discussed in mid-May.

Donato said everyone she had spoken to is very concerned.

"The Times poll got people thinking," she said, referring to a reader's ballot showing 71 per cent opposed to a bridge-tunnel link.

American-born, Donato said she had lived in Victoria 4½ years and is a landed immigrant.

She says she and her husband have done lot of travelling in North and South America and have found:

"There's no place like here, and the tourists come here because of the uniqueness of the islands."

In effect, she says, people who sign will be refusing permission for the government to use $500,000 to $1 million in tax revenue for an engineering feasibility study and an estimated $2.5 billion more for the project itself.

Trade centre plans to be aired Sunday

A public rally of Victorians opposed to the waterfront convention centre will be held at 7.30 p.m. Sunday at the Empress.

The ad hoc Committee for an Open Inner Harbor will air the issues surrounding the project.

Member Charles Ball of the James Bay Residents League said other organizers include Marjorie Pettigrew and former Conservative candidate Maggie Lynn.

They've invited community leaders and politicians to the rally.

$2 million housing plan set

A housing co-op backed by labor organizations and credit unions is planning a $2 million housing project in the Hillside-Cedar Hill area of Victoria.

With an offer of $450,000 the Victoria Innovative Housing Society was the only bidder for a 2.2 acre piece of city-owned property at Ryan and Mt. Stephen streets in north Fernwood.

City council recently advertised the property and the Rainbow site in Victoria West for sale. Tenders were due Thursday.

Ald. Bill McElroy said the co-op project could be under construction this year and ready for occupancy by early 1981 if it gets the go-ahead.

The society's bid for the land will be considered by council's land use planning and zoning committee when it meets at city hall Tuesday morning.

A society spokesman said it has tentative approval from the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp. for the co-op, which will include a certain percentage of residents on low incomes.

Their monthly payments will be held to 25 per cent of their income while CMHC picks up the rest.

"They like the Mt. Stephen project," McElroy said Friday of the federal agency's reaction.

The project will consist of 30 units in fourplexes and triplexes. The present estimate of the cost is $55,000 to $60,000 per unit, including the land.

McElroy said the monthly rent on the units would vary from $125 to $500.

The usual rule of thumb for such subsidized co-ops — similar to Marigold which the alderman manages — is 25 per cent for low income families, 50 per cent for those on moderate incomes and the rest for upper income brackets.

Victoria has agreed to provide one lot as a buffer area and park between the co-op and a dozen single-family homes on property it recently sold on Ryan Street.

The Mt. Stephen project is the third undertaken in the Victoria area by the society, which has also organied and built co-ops in Vancouver.

It has just finished renovating the Beckley Farms co-op, a former commercial project in James Bay with 10 units which it took over and made into a co-op.

The society, backed by credit unions, the B.C. Federation of Labor and individual unions, including the International Woodworkers of America and the carpenters, also had part of the Glentana project in View Royal.

On the Rainbow site, the city received five bids ranging from $378,000 to $630,000. Prices vary so much because the bidders have differing proposals for the 1½ acres of land on the south Vic West waterfront between Russel and Robert streets.

A maximum of 21 housing units are allowed on the site under the R-J low density attached dwelling zoning.

Try for high a real downer

Two William Head prison inmates will be returned to the medium security institition this weekend sadder but wiser after nearly dying from the effects of mushroom poisoning.

Program director Colin Sheppard said today the pair, both 24, collapsed in a dormitory Thursday night after eating some mushrooms that grow wild on the 82-acre prison grounds.

Sheppard said the mushrooms are a perennial problem.

"Every year it comes up," he said. "We usually get some guy trying for a new high."

One of the inmates was unconsious and the other convulsing when they were found by staff about 10 p.m.

They were rushed to Royal Jubilee Hospital and admitted to the intensive care unit.

Sheppard said prison staff had no idea at the time what the men's trouble was but doctors at the hospital diagnosed the condition as acute poisoning caused by consuming the highly toxic mushroom amanita pantherina, also known as "death angel."

The men were transferred to a regular ward Friday and were in good condition today.

One of the inmates was serving two years for two counts of robbery and had been in prison since last September.

The other, serving eight years for importing and possession of a narcotic, started his sentence in February.

Their names were not released. One of the inmates celebrated his 24th birthday on Friday.

Sheppard said said staff tries to get rid of the mushrooms by cutting or using chemicals.

"But there are more than 80 acres out there. You can't destroy them all."

He said, however, the eradication program has been stepped up since the incident. On Friday guards were carting them off in bucket-loads.

There have been no other reports of poisonings this year.

"I think after this case, everything should cool out," Sheppard said.

Home show a big draw

About 8,000 Victorians went through the Home Expo 80 show at Esquimalt Arena on opening day Friday.

The show continues until 9 p.m. tonight and from noon to 6 p.m. Sunday.

Handicapped people are invited to tour the exhibits from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. Sunday when the show is closed to the general public.

Directors of the Housing and Urban Development of Canada, sponsors of the show, will be available to assist handicapped people at that time.

Local HUDAC president Alan MacGillivray said the first-day crowd of 8,000 puts the target of 30,000 visitors within reach and thetotal could hit 40,000.

Expo 80 organizer Kay Lines said the crowds were so large at times on Friday it was difficult for handicapped people to move around so it was decided to have a special opening for them Sunday morning.

There are several displays of wood-burning stoves andlandscaping and furnishing exhibits.

The show is in both the arena and the curling rink at Esquimalt Plaza.

Whelan canny on aid to farmers

By AL FORREST

Local farmers got a sympathetic hearing but no specific pledges of help from federal Agricultural Minister Eugene Whelan Friday.

It was the minister's first visit here since the election.

The farmers asked Whelan for an increase in the federal subsidy for transporting feed grains and for assistance in obtaining lower-cost irrigation water.

The minister agreed to consider both requests.

But a request for tariff help to counter excessive imports of potatoes was rejected.

The meeting was sponsored by the Saanich Peninsula Farmers Institute.

Central Saanich greenhouse grower Jack Arnaud said some significant progress was made because the minister expressed concern about the cost of both feed grain and irrigation water supplies.

"We've got a good chance of getting some help here."

He said Central Saanich farmers have asked for the right to tap the main water line for irrigation purposes, rather than build a second line as required under present regulations in order to qualify for government funding.

Arnaud said the water would be less expensive if it came from the main pipeline and the supply would be more than adequate for everyone's needs.

He said Whelan is concerned that feed grains cost $30 more a ton in Central Saanich than in the Fraser Valley because of transportation costs.

WHELAN
...no promises

The waiting time at the ferry is a significant cost factor.

While there is a federal subsidy, the cost of transportation has increased faster than the rate of government help, putting a cost burden on local farmers.

Whelan said he would give the matter immediate study although he made no firm promise on action.

The minister also agreed to get further details on irrigation costs.

Whelan outlined farming conditions across Canada and said some sectors are in trouble, notably the pig farmers of Ontario.

He said there have been high profits in pigs in recent years but so many farmers went into the business that supplies now are far in excess of demand and prices have collapsed.

Lt.-Gov. terms extended

OTTAWA (CP) — The terms of two lieutenants-governor have been extended, Prime Minister Trudeau announced Friday.

A release from his office said Lieut.-Gov. Pauline McGibbon of Ontario has agreed to stay in office an extra five months to Sept. 10 while Lieut.-Gov. Gordon A. Winter of Newfoundland has agreed to a one-year extension to next April 1.

Mrs. McGibbon, the first woman to be a lieutenant-governor in Canada, was sworn in April 10, 1974, while Winter took office July 2 the same year.

Mrs. McGibbon, 69, was chancellor of the University of Toronto immediately prior to her appointment and has long been active in supporting the performing arts.

New Unionist Party seeks tie with U.S.

REGINA (CP) — The movement to join Western Canada with the United States evolved into a political party in Saskatchewan Friday, with Dick Collver as its leader.

Collver, until November the leader of the provincial Drogressive Conservative party, said he and fellow independent Dennis Ham, also a former PC, were forming the Unionist Party.

The name, he said, refers to "the best union."

The party will operate in the other three Western provinces and in the two territories within 60 days, he said.

Collver, who represents Nipawin, and Ham, provincial member for Swift Current, announced earlier this year they would sit as independents dedicated to joining with the U.S.

Since then, it's been learned that Collver and Ham qualify as a party in terms of the Saskatchewan legislature. They are eligible for more than $50,000 in grants.

Collver said it wasn't the money but the numbers of people behind him that led to the decision to become a party. Collver said he and Ham would use all of the money for their party and none of it for personal purposes.

"We had no idea that the support was so strong," Collver said. There was no indication so many people wanted to take action on the idea.

"The people are ready now to express in concrete fashion their dissatisfaction with compulsory bilingualism, and all of the other centralist dogma which is being perpetrated on our region," Collver said in a statement.

The new party will field candidates in the next provincial election in Western Canada, likely in Manitoba, he said.

Mountie top brass shuffled

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP has shuffled six of its top officers, Commissioner R.H. Simmonds said in a news release Friday.

Assistant Commissioner J.G.R. Marcoux, now commanding officer of C division in Montreal, will become deputy commissioner of Canadian police services, replacing J.R.R. Quintal, who will head criminal operations.

THE CANDIDATES' MATCHES

The matches to choose the official challenger to World Champion Anatoly Karpov and Women's World Champion Maya Chiburdanidze, both of the Soviet Union are under way.

THE BACKGROUND: The World Championship comes around every third year, though it actually takes four years to determine the champion. The current cycle provides a good example:

1978: Karpov and Viktor Korchnoi played for the title. At the same time, contests were held in each of the world's 12 "Zones" to determine participants in the next phase of the cycle.

1979: The Interzonal tournaments were held to determine the candidates. The three best players in each of two Interzonals (Riga, USSR, and Rio de Janeiro for the men, Rio and Alicante, Spain, for the women) were seeded with the last candidate eliminated in the previous cycle and the loser of the previous Championship match.

1980: The Candidates' Matches will be played to select Challengers to the World Champions. These are elimination matches.

1981: The World Champions will attempt to defend their titles and the next round of the Zonal Championships will be played.

THE PLAYERS: Viktor Korchnoi (Switzerland) is currently the third-ranked player in the world. He is 48.

Tigran Petrosian (USSR) was World Chanpion from 1963-1968. He plays Korchnoi in the First Candidate's Match. He is 50.

Mikhael Tal (USSR) held the world title from 1960-1961, at the time the youngest World Champion in history. Plagued by ill health, he has had mixed results in the two decades since. His impressive results in 1979 have made him the world's second-ranked player, right behind Karpov. He is 43.

THE REST: LEV POLUGAEVSKY, (USSR) is 45 and currently the fifth-ranked player in the world. He plays Tal.

ANDRAS ADORJAN, of Hungary, 29, is a newcomer to the Candidates' matches and plays Huebner.

LAJOS PORTISCH, also of Hungary, is ranked fourth in the world ranking. Has a powerful style of play. He is 42.

BORIS SPASSKY (USSR) was World Champion from 1968 to 1972, losing the famous Bobby Fischer match. He beat Portisch in a previous match, and plays Portisch again in this deciding Candidates' match. He is 43.

THE WOMEN AT THE TOP

NONA GAPRINDDASHVILI (USSR) dominated women's chess for the 14 years she held the Women's World Championship. She lost it to 17-year-old Maya Chiburdanidze in 1978. She is 38. At only 17, NONA IOSELIANI (USSR) is a great favorite. She will play SZUSZA VEROCI (Hungary), a chess professional from Budapest. NINO GURIELI (USSR) plays Nona. ELENA AHMILOVSKAYA (USSR) plays NANA ALEXANDRIA (USSR) and TANIA LEMACHKO (USSR) plays MARIA LITINSKAYA (USSR).

The solution to the problem above is: 1.Q-K2,-QPxN; 2.Q-N2 mate; or 1.Q-K2,BPxN; 2.Q-R2 mate; or 1.Q-K2,N-B4; 2.N-B4 mate, etc.
